Dayan Makes Stand

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)— Defense Minister Moshe Dayan declared today Israeli troops alone will fight any war with the Arabs. He said he is firmly opposed to the use of foreign troops— such as Americans or British— on Israel's side.

The soldier-diplomat, recalled to the top defense job in a coalition government just this week, told a conference of several hundred newsmen: "I personally would not expect nor want anyone else to fight for us. I wouldn't like American or British boys getting killed here in order to secure our safety.

"I do not want other people to fight and get killed for us."

As he spoke, the U.N. Security Council resumed debate on the Middle East crisis in New York. It postponed voting on rival peace proposals until next week.

In another development, a leader campaigning among Arabs in Jordan for a holy war against Israel has received an indirect warning from King Hussein not to try to use the Middle East crisis for personal political gain.

Meanwhile, an Egyptian envoy to Brazil claimed Friday that Egypt has no intention of destroying Israel, diplomatic sources reported. Cairo radio broadcast a speech by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser May 26 in which he said Israel would have to start any Arab-Israeli war but if it did, war "will be total and the objective will be to destroy Israel."

The expressions of restraint underlined the shaky nature of Arab unity but did nothing to relieve tension along the borders of Jewish Israel and the Arab nations surrounding her.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said in Washington that if Egypt's threat to block Israeli shipping from the Gulf of Aqaba is not solved peacefully, a clash could mushroom into much more than just a local conflict in "only a matter of hours."

The gulf blockade issue also held up agreement among the 15 nations of the U.N. Security Council on measures aimed at easing the Middle East crisis.

The envoy in Brazil was Hussein Zulfikar Sabri, one of several men sent by Nasser to campaign in possibly sympathetic nations for the Arab cause.

Diplomatic sources said Brazilian Foreign Minister Jose de Magalhaes Pinto asked specifically whether Nasser had said Egypt aimed to liquidate Israel. They said Sabri denied Nasser ever had made such a statement or that it represents Egyptian policy.

In the Jordanian sector of Jerusalem, Ahmen Shukairy, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, urged thousands of Arabs to wage holy war on Israel.

The purse was found later near Dunagan's Market, 116 Branum, but the money was missing, police reported.

E. W. Pollard, 835 Tanner, reported to police Friday that cosmetics valued at about $50 were taken from the Vera Beauty Salon on May 29. The theft was reportedly to have occurred after a cleaning woman left a door open.

In other activity, Richard A. Sargent, 915 Taylor, was charged early today with careless and imprudent driving. He was arrested at William and Branum.

Chester P. Dockins, 408 Lillian Dr., was charged at 9:35 a.m. today with assault and battery.

Regiment Riddled By Marine Assault

SAIGON (A) — A veteran Communist regiment of almost 3,000 men in a fortified ridgeline was under steady assault today by more than 2,000 Marines aided by air and artillery strikes.

The Red regiment was reported to have lost 372 dead in the preceding 24 hours while fighting to retain its stronghold in Quang Tin Province a bare 25 miles south of the main U.S. Marine Base at Da Nang.

Leathernecks sweeping through the fooothills 18 miles in from the China Sea have been battering at the Communit unit for a week, killing 571 Reds.

In the past 24 hours the Marines appear to have pinned down the regiment on a three-mile ridgeline rising some 600 feet above a valley of paddy-fields and streams.

Another force of about 2,000 Marines made an amphibious assault landing 21 miles northeast of Hue in a move to cut one of the infiltration routes of North Vietnamese troops.

The war in the air also rose in intensity, with raids penetrating north of Hanoi Friday. Two American jets were downed, making 569 planes lost over North Vietnam.

The Navy put the Leatherneck amphibious force ashore in isolated dunes about 25 miles below the demilitarized zone. More Marines were landed by helicopter about six miles inland.

The sudden landing was made Friday and announced today. Military reports listed no immediate contact with the enemy.

The landing is designed to sweep out Communist controlled areas just above the Viet Cong strongold known as the "Street Without Joy" because of its long and bloody history of guerrilla fighting.

The South Vietnamese claimed they chopped up the crack 808th Viet Cong mobile battalion in a battle Friday a few miles below the zone and above Quang Trie City, the province capital. The Red battalion of some 600 men lost 200 dead to air, artillery and infantry pounding in a running battle.

The latest Marine clash erupted in full force Friday about nooon. It continued through the night and into today, sometimes with Marines and Communists grappling at bayonet point.

The destroyer Bigelow cruised off the coast with its big guns ready to provide support for the infantrymen.

The last amphibious assault in the northernmost areas was May 18 when Marines were landed for the first time inside the demilitarized zone.

In air action U.S. pilots reported several dogfights with Communist MIG interceptors Friday during raids on rail facilities northeast of Hanoi. No U.S. or enemy planes were immediately listed as downed.

The U.S. Command said several battalions of Marines were hitting Communist positions at Tam Ky under cover of air strikes and artillery. Early reports had 117 North Vietnamese killed, but there was no immediate word on Marine casualties.

The action continues in Operation Union 2, which began May 26 with a general assault by 3,000 U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops on the 3rd North Vietnamese Regiment and the 21st Viet Cong Regiment. Both enemy units had been operating in the sector for some time.

South Vietnamese troops declared a victory Friday over the Viet Cong's 808th Mobile Battalion in an engagement south of the demilitarized zone.

A spokesman said 150 of the 500-man crack Viet Cong detachment were slain in an assault by South Vietnamese paratroopers, infantry and armor. The action was braced by air strikes and artillery.

Government casualties were not announced.

The engagement took place less than five miles east of the U.S. Marine base camp at Dong Ha 12 miles below the demilitarized zone. The spot is the southeastern corner of a sector bounded by four Marine posts and known as Leatherneck Square.

The U.S. Command disclosed that a record 38 U.S. planes went down over North Vietnam in May. In all, 2,286 planes and helicopters have been destroyed by hostile action and other causes in five years of U.S. action in the war.

Bertrand Soldier's Face Cut When Automobile Overturns

Kenneth Winders, 19, Bertrand soldier assigned to go to Vietnam, received face cuts on Interstate 55, north of New Madrid, at 5:50 a.m. today when his car overturned.

He was brought to the Missouri Delta Community hospital and transferred to the Blytheville air force base hospital.

The highway patrol said that he apparently went to sleep, lost control of his car, struck a rise in the median and overturned.

He was on his way home for a 30-day leave from Ft. Bragg, N.C., to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M.G. Winders, route two.

A graduate of Sikeston high school in 1965, he entered the army forces in July of that year.

Three teen-agers were bruised Friday at 5:50 p.m. on highway W. eight miles north of Poplar Bluff, when a 1961 Cadillac, driven by Charles McDaniels III, 16, Poplar Bluff, ran off the road and struck an embankment.

He lost control when he came over a hill and was rounding a curve.

Passengers were Freddie Haag, 14, and Tom Breeden, 14, both of Poplar Bluff.

The passengers were treated at the Poplar Bluff hospital.

Charles Hughes, 15, Grant City, driving a 1966 Chevrolet Friday morning on highway 114, four miles west of Sikeston, lost control and ran into a ditch. He was not injured.

Edward Gibson, 38, Jonesboro, Ark., driving on a gravel road, three and one-half miles north of Gray Ridge, lost control, ran off the highway into a ditch and overturned.

He escaped uninjured.

James Gross, 44, Qulin, was cut on his face, when he lost control of his 1967 Pontiac, ran off the road and struck a bridge abutment at 12:50 a.m. today on highway 53, north of Qulin.

He was treated at a Poplar Bluff hospital.

Levy Draws Three Years In Prison

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)— Capt. Howard B. Levy, the Army doctor who refused to train Vietnam-bound Green Beret medics, was dismissed from the Army today and sentenced to three years in prison for disloyalty and disobedience.

Defense requests that Levy be allowed to remain free, pending appeal, were denied. Levy was taken into custody in the courtroom and left in handcuffs.

The 30-year-old dermatologist, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., stood with hands clasped behind him, facing the 10-member court-martial board as the sentence was read.

Levy exhibited no emotion as he returned to his seat.

The sentence included dismissal from the Army, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and three years at hard labor.

Chief defense attorney Charles Morgan Jr., of the American Civil Liberties Union, requested that Levy be granted bail or parole while the verdict was appealed. But the law officer, Col. Earl V. Brown, said neither he nor the tribunal had authority under the law to grant the request.

Brown told the court-martial board that it could submit a motion for clemency, if desired, to the commanding officer at Fort Jackson, Maj. Gen. Gines Perez.

The tribunal took 2 hours and 20 minutes to agree on the penalty. Levy could have received up to eight years.

The tribunal convicted Levy Friday of disobeying an order to train Special Forces medics in his dermatology clinic and with making disloyal statements opposing U.S. policy in Vietnam.

Earlier, the government dropped two of the disloyalty charges against Levy. Army prosecutor Capt. Richard Shusterman asked that the charges be dropped.

Agency May Take Over Head Start, Saving Summer Program for Missouri Bootheel

The future of the summer Head Start program in the Bootheel, which has been the chief topic of controversy in the administration of anti-poverty funds in the six county area since the dismissal of Lloyd Phillips and Wm. Graves as assistant directors of the Delta Economic Opportunity Corporation, may be settled Monday night.

The Southeast Missouri Development Corporation headed by President Pat Lea will vote then on acceptance of sponsorship of the program. The meeting is planned for 7:30 p.m. at the corporation headquarters in Portageville.

The education committee of the SEMO Development Corporation will recommend sponsorship to the board, Lea said.

The five-member education committee met Wednesday night but took no action. Thursday night the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation voted to appoint Mike Cooper, Hayti, as temporary director of Head Start. He has served as assistant director of the program formerly headed by Phillips as director. It voted unanimously to have President Robert Edwards call the regional OEO office and request that the SEMO Development Corporation administer Head Start.

Lea said he received a letter urging the SEMO corp. to sponsor Head Start from Edwards Friday then polled the education committee. The education committee agreed to recommend that the board sponsor the program, but the decision of the board will determine the outcome, Lea stressed.

After polling the education committee, Lea said he called the regional OEO office in Kansas City. Don Thomason's office assured Lea that a representative would attend the Monday meeting and that if the board voted to sponsor Head Start, the representative would be ready to sign necessary papers.

Thomason said earlier that funds would not be released unless another regional agency agreed to take over the program.

The program is involved in a controversy over the poverty war administration in the Bootheel. Thomason has refused to permit DAEOC to continue to conduct the program in the region.

Lea said the education committee had received more than 100 letters from area educators and parents of children to be served by the $519,000 earmarked for the Head Start program. The letters urged that the SEMO Development Corporation sponsor the program, Lea said. It would serve about 1,700 children.

The SEMO Development Corporation has as its overall aim to promote education, commercial recreation and industry in the Bootheel.

The SEMO Development Corporation's three-man paid staff is federally financed through the DAEOC office but the two corporations function separately, Lea said.

Five Injured In Accidents

Five persons were admitted to the emergency room of the Missouri Delta Community hospital Friday:

Robert Moore, caught hand in printing press at work; Edward Gipson of Jonesboro, Ark., injured in car accident; Derieck Sellers, injured playing baseball; Jackie Tidwell, received cut on head when he fell and hit a bed; and Ethel Roberts, fell in a water meter hole injuring leg.

Shriver to Help Dedicate Clinic

ALBANY, Mo. (AP) -- Sargent Shriver, director of the federal anti-poverty campaign, will be in Albany Wednesday to dedicate a regional diagnostic center for mental retardation in honor of his late brother-in-law, President John Kennedy.

The $400,000 Center is one of eight that have been erected in the state. The others are at Joplin, Springfield, Hannibal, Poplar Bluff, Sikeston, Rolla and Kirksville.

Don Thomason, regional OEO director at Kansas City, said Shriver also would visit OEO program facilities in the state during his one-day visit.

PAT LEA, president of the Southeast Missouri Development Corporation looks at letters from educators and parents requesting the organization to assume sponsorship of the summer Head Start program to serve 1,700 children in the Bootheel.

Soviets Protest Ship Bombing

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet charge that two U.S. jets bombed a Russian ship off North Vietnam killing one crewman and injuring six, heightened chances today of a showdown with Moscow over raids by American planes in areas of Soviet shipping.

Shortly after Moscow received a report Friday from the captain of the Soviet ship Turkestan, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko handed a sharp protest to the U.S. Embassy's minister-counsellor, John C. Guthrie.

"In the event of a recurrence of such actions on the part of U.S. armed forces," Gromyko's note reportedly said, "the Soviet Union will be compelled to take appropriate measures to ensure the safety of its ships.

"The Soviet government insists, firstly, on the strict punishment of those responsible for the attack on the Soviet ship and, secondly, awaits assurances that there will be no recurrence of actions like this in respect of Soviet ships."

The U.S. Embassy had no immediate comment and forwarded the note to Washington.

The United States neither confirmed nor denied that U.S. planes bombed the ship, which the Soviets said was anchored in the harbor of Cam Pha, 50 miles north of Haiphong.

U.S. spokesmen have noted that American planes have tried to avoid hitting Soviet or other foreign vessels in raids along the North Vietnamese coast. The United States has answered earlier Soviet charges of hitting ships by saying that falling North Vietnamese antiaircraft shells were to blame.

Pravda, the official Communist party newspaper, printed the protest note on its front page today.

It commented: "It would be a mistake if the provacateurs did not fully consider the seriousness of the warning in the Soviet government's note. The sponsors of this kind of provocation evidently have a poor understanding of the situation and do not fully consider that they may be given a fitting rebuff."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Vladivostok than an electro-mechanic named "Rybachuk" died three hours after the Friday raid. A motor-mechanic named "Zemtzev" was reported in critical condition after a three-hour operation. Tass also said that "there were five lightly wounded" and that "there are bullet holes in the upper structure and the ship's boats."

Tass said the Turkestan, a diesel cargo ship, was carrying Fitzgibbon Jr., resigned.

Guard-Reserve Plan Faces Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Congress disturbed by the extent of U.S. military commitments in Vietnam while the Middle East is in turmoil views with hostile suspicion the Pentagon's move to trim Army National Guard and Reserve forces.

The Defense Department announced Friday a realignment of the Guard and Reserve that would eliminate nearly 1,275 units scattered across the country.

This would lop off 15 Guard divisions, each with its own local pride and traditions, producing combat divisions and 18 brigades with the aim of having them ready to fight within eight weeks of callup.

The Guard and Reserve would drop from their present authorized total strength of 685,000 to 640,000.

Stanley Resor, secretary of the Army, disclosed at the same time a proposal that draftees who complete two years of service may not be assigned to reserve units for the additional four years of their military obligation. He said this would affect about 30,000 men in Guard and Reserve units to be abolished.

While Cyrus R. Vance, deputy defense secretary, characterized the move as sharpening "the fighting edge" of the Reserve forces, there were clear signs Congress may intervene before the scheduled changeover late this summer.

Vance noted that while the reorganization plan itself requires no congressional action, a bill to lower the manpower floor of the Army Reserve would have to be passed. The proposed strength of 240,000 for the Reserve is 20,000 below the floor provided in current law.

Congress, traditionally sensitive to the retention of armories and drill payrolls in local communities, in the past has added

POR CHARLIE SAYS!

Enough disrespect has been shown for the Flag that a reaction has set in.

This was apparent in the patriotic parade spontaneously organized in New York City by a city employee.

The marchers, not all of them young and vigorous, protested the behavior of the legions of unwashed, long haired, slovenly draft card burners, creeps, and flag burners, which too frequently pollute the streets.

They established that the behavior of those who take their patriotism so casually is neither average, normal nor typical.

It is consoling to believe that the attendance at Memorial Day services in Sikeston was greater than it might have been expected because of this reaction.

In recent years neither Memorial Day nor Labor Day have been observed by Americans as being holidays with any deep meaning.

Too often those who have died in battle have either been forgotten by the masses in poorly attended ceremonies to honor them or the services have been abandoned because of lack of attendance.

Labor Day is not one in which many persons pay homage to the dignity of labor.

Both days have had a special meaning as holidays which has nothing to do with their origin.

Memorial Day is sort of a free wheeling first day of summer and Labor Day marks the beginning of fall recreational and outdoor activity. Relaxation and entertainment have been the central theme - two days devoted to selfish, self centered idleness and rest.

They are days for families to get together, of picnics, outings, automobile racing, ball games, and less happily of motor trips, which too often involve too much speed, booze and tragedy.

Whatever the reason, more than 200 turned out for a revival of the Memorial Day service at the Garden of Memories cemetery.

The cemetery officials, the Rev. Joseph Wagner, pastor of the First Methodist church; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter McGrane of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church, and the national guards deserve credit for taking part in it.

It would be comforting to think that those who did not attend gave at least a fleeting thought to those who sacrificed their lives so that the rest of us can live in freedom.

LONG'S POLITICAL FUTURE

The political future of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, can only be described as being very much in doubt as a result of disclosures this week concerning his close legal and financial connections with St. Louis attorney Morris Shenker. With Life magazine accusing Bowling Green's most famous citizen of attempting to influence the outcome of Jimmy Hoffa's legal battle to stay out of prison, the real political coup de grace has been the disclosure that Senator Long has been receiving large legal fees from Shenker, a St. Louis attorney who seems to specialize in representing some of the more unsavory elements in St. Louis, East St. Louis and elsewhere.

As this newspaper noted yesterday, the real question that Senator Long needs to answer is why he is receiving as much as $2,000 per month for legal services from the Shenker law firm.

This, too, is the question that voters will be asking in 1968, if the Senator decides he will seek re-election.

The reaction to the Long disclosures in Jefferson City has been one of surprise and almost disbelief that the junior Senator would permit himself to get so deeply involved in feathering his own financial nest. As one veteran capital observer noted, "I thought Ed Long was smarter than that."

The unfavorable publicity is bound to have an effect on Long's political future, and perhaps sooner than he thinks. If Senator Williams does not succeed in harassing Long, and perhaps even demanding an investigation into the Missourian's personal affairs, then there may well be ambitious Democrats who will challenge the Senator in next year's primary.

The Republicans, and specifically Rep. Tom Curtis, will also receive great encouragement from the disclosures.

Several Democratic opponents for Long are already being mentioned, including Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who seriously considered challenging Long in 1962, and former Governor John M. Dalton of Kennett and Jefferson City. Undoubtedly both men are now thinking seriously of stepping up to oppose Long.

Jackson County Judge Charles Curry of Kansas City is another possible nominee, and some have even complimented State Senator Earl Blackwell of Jefferson County by mentioning him as a possible opponent. The latter is a questionable opponent at best.

Some of the state's more practical political observers have cynically said the public will forget about the Long case by the time the 1968 election rolls around. This might have been the case 20 years ago, but today, voters are more politically minded and less prone to overlook the blemishes of public figures, particularly when they are drawing large figures for doing something besides their official duties.

We don't believe the voters will overlook the Long record, as it is now being written. Indeed, the political future of Edward V. Long of Bowling Green may soon be as stale as this week's Life magazine.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

Who is the Forgotten Man? He is that individual who does an honest's day's work, pays his bills, brings up two or more children, keeps up a small savings account, never asks for charity from anyone, never gets into trouble with the police, never finds fault unless a principle is involved - in short, he is the individual who keeps going on his own momentum, good times, bad times, or indifferent times.

When the hat is passed around, the Forgotten Man chips in his mite. The taxpayer visits him regularly, and collects toll for the upkeep of the police courts, jails, workhouses, and the relief rolls - none of which the Forgotten Man ever uses. He is self-supporting, self-sufficient, and being so, he is counted in on nothing except the census.

The Forgotten Man is just the everyday, common, ordinary, plain citizen who does the best he can and makes a pretty good job of it. He is the man you can count on in times of war or in times of peace, in times of hysterical prosperity or in times of gloomy depression; in times of Republican management or in times of Democratic management. He is the dependable old horse broken to harness, and he will stand without hitching.

Remember, there are millions of him, and there isn't much chance that he will ever go crazy even though the whole world about him does seem inclined that way. When things get too bad he will take a hand at running them himself, and you can depend upon him to do it in a sensible way. - Biloxi-Gulfport (Miss.) Daily Herald

TO ERR IS MACHINE, TOO

There's a certain unpopular uneasiness about computers. But it isn't because people are afraid they will someday be automated out of their jobs. It's just a feeling that machines are becoming too humanlike.

This was revealed in a study based on interviews with 3,000 persons, reported in Datamation magazine. It was found that many people believe - wrongly - that the computer is infallible and that it is a "kind of superbrain which thinks as humans do and which can provide instant solutions to highly complicated problems that the ordinary man cannot even begin to understand."

As more and more people come into daily contact with computers, however, this modern-day myth is expected to lose its force. Familiarity in this case will breed not contempt but better understanding of thinking machines' true capacity to think -- which is no more than men give them.

HUBBY'S CHOICE

THE BANKER WAS plainly exasperated. "Your finances are in terrible shape," he chided the customer. "Overdrawn accounts, extended loans -- why do you allow your wife to spend more money than you make?"

"Frankly," the man replied with a sigh, "because I'd rather be bawled out by you than by her."

A STUDY IN LOGISTICS

In transportation, there is nothing that can compare for sheer efficiency with a string of railroad cars on a track. They can move more people and more goods, with greater economy, than any other mode of transport. This is one of the reasons why those who have waited with pen in hand to write the epitaph of the railroads will have a long wait.

The efficiency of rail transport is graphically illustrated in a book written by Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island. He has no doubts about the importance of railroads in any balanced transportation system. In his book, "Megalopolis Unbound", he says, "One land of urban expressway can accomodate up to about 2,200 passenger cars per hour, which at the national average of 1.3 commuters per day would carry 2,860 people. By contrast, a single set of transit tracks can accommodate about 30 trains an hour with two - minute headways between trains. If each train has 10 cars and each car carries a capacity load, including standees, of 200 people, the single set of tracks can deliver 60,000 people per hour. The rail line thus theoretically can deliver 21 times as many people per hour as the lane of the expressway."

Besides moving a larger volume of "payload" in what amounts to a single package, rail transport is more efficient and more economical because it takes some 7.5 times more force to move a loaded highway vehicle than a steel wheeled railroad car with a comparable load. It is little wonder that when transport needs soar, as in the case of a military emergency, the railroads quickly become an irreplaceable logistical lifeline.

"Could I buy you a drink?" he asked, by way of striking up a conversation.

"No thank you," she said, "I don't drink."

"What about a little dinner with me in my room?"

"No, I don't believe that would be proper," she said.

Having had no success with the subtler approaches, the young man pressed directly to the point: "I am charmed by your refreshing beauty, mademoiselle, and will give you anything your heart desires if you will spend the night with me."

"Oh, no, no, monsieur, I could never do a thing like that."

"Tell me," the young man said, laughing, "don't you ever do anything the slightest bit improper?"

"Oui," said the French girl, "I tell lies."

H.L. Hunt Says

DISTRICT PLAN IS SUPERIOR

The District Plan of choosing presidential electors is far better than any other proposal put forward to change the present antiquated system of naming those electors.

Many disadvantages are apparent in the direct vote plan advocated by some. Prominent among these disadvantages is the fact that this plan would deliver a new and severe blow to the doctrine of states rights.

The direct vote for President and Vice President would necessarily result in the Federal Government conducting elections within the boundaries of the individual states. The direct vote plan would immediately nullify the systems for absentee voting which vary across the nation from state to state and are formulated for the convenience of the citizens of each state.

Under the direct election plan, the Federal Government would have to impose age limits to apply in all the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The Federal Government also would set residence requirements for voting.

We now have states which allow citizens to vote at the age of 18 and one state which allows citizens to vote at the age of 19. Four states allow citizens to vote at the age of 20. These age limits different from the more customary limit of 21 are prescribed by the residents and voters of the states in accordance with their best opinion as to the proper age at which the state's citizens may be afforded the privilege of suffrage.

These are potent arguments against the direct vote, and there are others of equal force. The District Plan offers none of these disadvantages. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

NASSER'S ALLIES

On May 27, Drew Pearson reported that Nasser has so "electrified the Arab world and is riding so high that it's impossible for his bitter enemies, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and King Hussein of Jordan, to refuse him support."

On May 30, King Hussein flew to Cairo to sign a defense pact with Nasser. On the same day, the leaders of Algeria and Morocco also announced support for Nasser.

WASHINGTON -- Reporters were told nothing about the critical 90-minute conference last week between president Johnson and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban. From White House insiders, however, this column has now learned what was said.

The president would have preferred to avoid the confrontation, kept Eban waiting most of the day for an appointment.

While storm clouds darkened over the Near East, LBJ busied himself with such urgent matters as accepting a season pass to the Washington whips soccer games. He also greeted the New Iranian Ambassador, said goodbye to the departing Italian ambassador and consulated with his ambassadors on the problems of Peru, Venezuela and El Salvador.

When Eban was finally admitted into the president's oval office late in the evening, he quickly got to the question the president didn't want to answer: What was the United States going to do about the Egyptian blockade of the Tiran Strait?

Eban recalled that Israel had given up strategic Sharm El Sheik, which commands the narrow strait, at the specific request of the Eisenhower administration in 1957. The United States asked Israel to move her troops out and permit U.N. troops to move in.

The United States, declared the aide-memore, "Believes that the Gulf of Aqaba comprehends international waters and that no nation has the right to prevent free and innocent passage in the Gulf and through the Straits giving access thereto."

Eban asked President Johnson whether the United States intended to honor this. Discreetly he left unsaid the fact that the United States has sent 450,000 troops to Vietnam to honor a commitment less specific, in an area less strategic.

The President expressed sympathy for the Israeli position and reiterated that the United States regards the blockaded Strait as an international waterway. However, he warned that Israel would hurt herself in world eyes if she took military action to break the blockade.

This could alienate many countries, he said, which otherwise would support the principle of free access. It would be better, he suggested, if Israel would let the big maritime powers bring pressure upon Egypt to keep the international waterway open.

The President asked Eban to give world diplomacy a chance to settle the crisis, meanwhile promised to press for a satisfactor solution.

Note -- What irks Israeli leaders is that, while they have held back, Egypt has taken the ground overlooking the Straits of Tiran previously held by Israel and later by the United Nations. The Egyptians have hastifily fortified this strategic position, making it extremely costly for Israel to take it back by military force.

FURORE IN FLORIDA

An illustration of how to sour American sympathy for Israel is now taking place in Miami Beach, where Israeli politics has got mixed up with Florida politics.

In the current race for mayor of Miami Beach, Mayor Elliott Roosevelt, second son of President Roosevelt, is being challenged in a run-off by Jay Dermer, whose wife is an Israeli. Both have been campaigning passionately against Elliott, partly on the charge that when his father was president in 1937 he would not allow the "Exodus," with a load of refugees, to land in Florida en route to Cuba.

Whatever may have been the facts in this 30-year-old case, Elliott Roosevelt was then a youngster in college and had nothing to do with his father's policies. Furthermore, in later years, Elliott has taken over the work of his late mother in promoting bonds for Israel and has attended dinner after dinner in an effort to sell bonds and support Israel.

Despite this, some synagogues in the Miami Beach area are campaigning with the slogan "Vote for a Jew, don't vote for a Goy," while Mrs. Dermer and her husband are campaigning on the promise that if Dermer is elected mayor of Miami Beach he can help to stop the threat of war against Israel.

Note -- Most American Jews pride themselves on voting for a candidate for his abilities, not for his religion. In the last New York Mayor-Alty race, New York Jews had a chance to vote for Abe Beame, a fellow Jew and a Democrat, who opposed John Lindsay, a protestant Republican. Forty per cent of the New York Jews voted for Lindsay.

LIBERTY LOBBIES

The Liberty Lobby, whose founder regards Nazy Germany as the model for his brand of "Liberty," has joined the right-wing drive to recall Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Recall petitions have been printed in California by cosmetics distributor William Penn Patrick, a militant right-winger who ran against Ronald Reagan in the Republic primary because he considered Reagan too liberal.

Now Willis Carto, the chief patriarch and panjandrum of the Liberty Lobby, has thrown his organization into the fray. He is best known for his letters deploring the defeat of Adolf Hitler as a "tragedy for civilization" and advocating the shipment of American Negroes to Africa.

The Liberty Lobby has called a series of nine meetings throughout Idaho to set up a "telephone network" to organize a "grass roots" response to liberal legislation. The network also will be used to stir up opposition to church.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

THE TILTED SCALES

THE "LIBERAL" majority on the U.S. Supreme Court has a noble self-image. It is impossible to read its indignant opinions without concluding that here are gentlemen who see themselves as forthright defenders of little people against the clever and the powerful.

To this end, and particularly through its broad interpretations of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, the court has, in the past seven years, radically changed the rules of criminal evidence in America.

The key cases in this change were the Mallory decision of June 24, 1957, the Escobedo decision of June 22, 1964, and the Miranda case of June 13, 1966. The stars must be in great position for American criminals around mid-June.

MALLORY, a confessed Washington rapist who was sentenced to death in federal court, was turned loose by the supreme justices on the grounds that too long a time (2 p.m. until the next morning) elapsed between his arrest and his arraignment.

At 8 p.m., after his dinner, Mallory signed the typed confession and went to bed.

The Supreme Court held that the delay violated the defendant's constitutional rights. A short time after his release Mallory was arrested for a similar crime in Philadelphia.

DANNY ESCOBEDO, a 22-year-old Chicago Mexican, was convicted of murdering his brother-in-law after he had made damaging statements to the assistant state's attorney, which were later admitted in evidence.

The court ruled that Escobedo must go free because he was not permitted to have his attorney present while being questioned, nor was he told he need say nothing.

For the majority, Justice Goldberg said: "A system of criminal law enforcement which comes to depend on the 'confession' will, in the long run, be less reliable and more subject to abuses than a system which depends on extrinsic evidence independently secured through skillful investigation."

But in the dissent Justice Harlan said the rule "unjustifiably fetters legitimate police investigation." Justice Stewart remarked that there is nothing in the Constitution which "requires police to give advice." And Justice White added:

"By abandoning the voluntary-involuntary test for admissability of confessions, the court seems driven by the notion that it is uncivilized law enforcement to use an accused's own admissions against him at his trial.... The right to counsel now not only entitles the accused to counsel's advice and aid in preparing for trial, but stands as an impenetrable barrier to any interrogation once the accused has become a suspect. . .The rule is impossible to administer unless police cars are equipped with public defenders."

ON MARCH 3, 1963, a citizen of Phoenix named Miranda kidnaped and raped an 18-year-old girl. She picked him out of a police line-up, and he later wrote out a statement admitting and describing the crime. He was promptly convicted, but the Supreme Court set him free, again on grounds largely based on the Escobedo case.

The Fifth Amendment says that no man "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

The Supreme Court majority has decided that any police interrogation is equivalent to a "criminal case." This, Justice Harlan, Stewart and White describe as "poor constitutional law that will ultimately discourage any confession at all."

And Justice Harlan added: "We know that some crimes cannot be solved without confessions and that the court is taking a real risk with society's welfare in imposing its new regime on the country."

IN THE meantime, the incidence of crimes of violence is rising about four times as fast as population. City parks are empty after sundown. The streets of Washington are unsafe at night. Criminal courts of our great cities are so clogged, and conviction under the Supreme Court restrictions is often so uncertain, that reduction of the charge below that of the crime actually committed is becoming the rule rather than the exception.

Therefore, Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) and 15 other senators have introduced a joint resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to forbid the Supreme Court or any lesser court from throwing out a conviction based on a voluntary confession.

No one defends the rack or the rubber hose, but the question is: "Has the Warren court, by its stringent restrictions on police inquiry, made punishment so difficult that the safety of honest citizens is in growing peril?

If the court is to be curbed, it can only be curbed by constitutional amendment. That is, if the court doesn't decide that the amendment is unconstitutional.

TEACHERS CUT CLASS LINES

Seek Money For Drive To Unionize Two Million Instructors

New York: -- At the Madison Square Garden "mass-in" one recent night, at least 7,000 teachers, mostly young, "bulged - in" with true proletarian enthusiasm. They sat shoulder to shoulder with sewer workers, subway token sellers, motormen and zoo attendants. And with 12,000 other workers they roared in unison against the state government.

The other car, one of their leaders said this was the true sign of the times on the education-organization front -- no class lines, just picket lines -- and solidarity with the rest of labor in every large city until the American Federation of Teachers grows into the land's biggest union. And he meant it.

He put the national goal at well over 1.5 million in the "new," revitalized American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO).

In response to a sharp and quizzical look on this correspondent's face, the teachers' leader, Al Shanker, vice president of the national federation and leader of the huge 47,000 - member New York United Federation of Teachers -- largest local of its kind in the free world -- outlined his battle plan.

"First you must understand," said the lanky, youngish militant, "our own new fearlessness and militancy. First, we were arrested over in Woodbridge, N.J., and just a few weeks ago in Baltimore 120 of our people were hauled in by sheriffs and their deputies. We defied court injunctions. And we'll continue wherever they rule we can't strike or picket."

The federation's objectives are the big cities, he added, ticking them off -- Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland (Ore.), Buffalo, Milwaukee and the Twin Cities. In the suburbs of New York alone, he reckoned, 100,000 teachers were "ready for unionization." Out on Long Island, said he, there soon would be union elections among 25,000 teachers.

The recruiters are there in fields the public just doesn't yet see, continued Shanker.

"There are the indigenous poor," he said.

These according to the teachers' leader will total "hundreds of thousands in the next two years and perhaps a million in the next decade." Under the federal government's new project, the "poverty women" will be hired as assistant teachers. They will assist right in the classrooms. They'll aid the younger children by talking in their native languages.

The women from the slum and ghetto areas will help children -- whose problems they know best -- with their clothes and free lunches and to prepare for the return home. The ladies will read aloud to them, translate into English if necessary, keep the tougher ones, the maladjusted, the retarded, from battling each other. And the women will mark papers as well.

Both in New York and at the American Federation of Teachers' national headquarters in Chicago, these "assistant teachers" will come under the AFT jurisdiction. They'll be approached both on the school level and through the "community union" operation near their homes. No doubt the jurisdiction is vast.

But so are other teaching echelons. The federation will go after the parochial school systems as well as private schools and community colleges.

"This is a vast field and untouched," said Shanker. "Most of the latter employ the equivalent of high school teachers. In this city alone, they number over 100,000. This is the future."

New organization techniques of this future will be unveiled at the AFT's 51st Annual Convention in Washington's Hotel Hilton beginning Aug. 21. Militancy will be the motif: The spotlight will be on those who struck St. John's University; those who were arrested and jailed in New Jersey; those who were cooped up en masse in Baltimore.

Speakers will report on "how it was done" in Washington where the big Local 6 -- one of 675 such units across the land -- won the first election ever held in the city's educational system. Others will report on the "amazing" growth of the AFT from 48,000 in 1960 to 140,000 today. Undoubtedly the 1,000 delegates will roar support of the gargantuan New York local which plans to strike the New York City school system early in September.

No doubt, the teachers are on the march. They plan special concentrations in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois where a ban on such strikes of school systems is now being pushed.

But it all depends on the root of everything -- money. Until now the national office, presided over by the bantam Charles Cogen, has had only nine organizers in the field. The AFT hopes to move to Washington and take on triple that number. But the money just isn't pouring out of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Dept. as it did ($1.1 million) in the past few years.

The big unions, which pledged to back their moral support with hard currency, just are not giving to the IUD's "Special Organizing Fund."

So the teachers now are trying to get their more proletarian brothers and sisters, as they say inside labor, to unclog the financial pipelines as well as wipe out the class lines. But money or no money, they're on the move.

Danger Lurks For Children

ST. LOUIS -- Chances of children being struck by cars are greater now that schools are closing for the summer. Teachers stress safety for nine months each year, but parents must take over this life-protecting responsibility during vacation time, according to the Automobile Club of Missouri. Parents should warn children to stay out of streets, to be aware of traffic when they do come near streets and to play only in yards or playgrounds.

Motorists also share in the responsibility of protecting youngsters. The Auto Club says a child chasing a ball is not likely to stop to look both ways before running into a street. Drivers must watch for children at play and take extra precautions in driving, especially in residential areas. Motorists should also remember that children are out on bicycles, roller skates and scooters during the day, when they normally are in school. The driver who expects to see a youngster in his path is the one prepared to stop short of tragedy.

Parents should warn their children that drivers cannot always see them in time to stop, warns the AAA, especially if they dart from between parked cars into a busy street. Even residential areas can become hazardous if children do not watch out for vehicles. A driver may be temporarily blinded by the sun and fail to see a child dash off the curb.

Children should be taught to look both ways before crossing any street, and to walk, not run from the curb. If there are no sidewalks, children should always walk on the left, facing the traffic.

Safety rules cannot be repeated too often to children, says the Auto Club.

Publicity Threat Rids Senate of Unpaid Food Bills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. E. L. Bartlett figures he has hit on a sure strategy for getting his colleagues to pay their Capitol food bills: Just hint at publicizing the names of the delinquent diners.

That's what the Alaska Democrat did last month when he made it known that some senators—whom he didn't name at the time—owed thousands of dollars to the several Senate restaurants, cafeterias and snack bars.

Bartlett happily told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee Friday that his strategy worked. According to Philip L. Roof, a Senate executive assistant, bills totaling about $17,000 were quickly paid and there are no current delinquencies.

He said some of the delinquent food bills had run as high as $5,000 with $3,000 the largest amount owed by any single senator in May.

Bartlett noted that just to let the news media know about such delinquencies seemed to have produced "a great outpouring of funds."

As currently operated, the various Senate eating places will run up an estimated deficit this year of $363,000— a tab taxpayers must pick up.

Little League Boxes

Presidential proclamation and act of Congress, June 1, 1959, the week beginning the second Monday of June annually is set aside to call public attention to the active role of Little League in providing a wholesome and beneficial program for a large segment of the nation's youth. Almost two million youngsters are enrolled in Little League for 1967.

The proclamation was initiated by former President Dwight D. Eisenhower and perpetuated by the late President John F. Kennedy who noted Little League's encouragement of physical fitness in the broad interest of national vigor and vitality.

"Little League Baseball not only promotes the physical well-being but instills qualities of fairness, cooperation and discipline -- qualities which contribute to the development of good citizenship".

Throughout the nation and in all 50 states, special programs of games and events are scheduled by local leagues to underline the significant role of Little League in American community life. Governors, mayors, municipal officials, civic and public affairs agencies have locally stressed the occasion by urging public participation in Little League activities.

--Little League Baseball Week will be observed June 11-17.

Lou Connects, Carlton Wins

By the Associated Press

Steve Carlton of the Cardinals and Curt Simmons of the Cubs had a scoreless pitchers duel going for five innings Friday night in St. Louis when the Cards' Lou Brock ended it with a two-run homer for a 2-1 St. Louis victory.

Brock's clout for the Cards followed an error by Cub third sacker Ron Santo.

Carlton's bid for a shutout spoiled in the bottom of the eighth when the Cubs' Ted Savage hit a bases-empty homer.

Carlton held the Cubs hitless until the sixth when shortstop Don Kessinger drilled an infield hit off Ed Spiezio's glove at Third. Carlton is now 4-1 for the year.

Simmons, 2-5, gave up only five hits in seven innings. The Cubs have lost five times in the last six starts. They meet the Cards again today with Ferguson Jenkins (5-3 going against big Bob Gibson (6-4) of the Cards.

Lightning struck Atlanta's Jay Ritchie the second time around and although he had to wait awhile for the thunderclap, Cincinnati Manager Dave Bristol isn't complaining.

Ritchie fought his way out of a bases-loaded, none out jam, leaving the Reds' winning run stranded on third base in ninth inning Friday night, when he climbed out on the limb again in the 11th, Vada Pinson didn't let him off.

Pinson's fourth hit of the night drove in Tommy Helms with the winning run and lifted the first place Reds to a 5-4 comeback victory over the slumping Braves.

In other National League games Philadelphia topped Houston 5-3, and Pittsburgh rapped Los Angeles 5-3. New York's game at San Francisco was postponed by rain.

The Braves were leading 4-3 on Hank Aaron's two-run homer which erased a 3-2 Cincinnati edge in the ninth. But the Reds struck back quickly. Tony Perez jolted Pat Jarvis with a leadoff double. Deron Johnson's triple tied the score and put the winning run on third with none out.

Tommy Helms was purposely walked and then Ritchie came on to walk Art Shamsky intentionally. That set up a force play at any base, but Ritchie didn't need one. He struck out Leo Cardenas and Don Pavletich and then got Floyd Robinson on a pop fly, stranding the runners.

It remained 4-4 until the 11th when Helms opened with a single and one out later, moved to third on Cardenas' hit. Pavletich walked, loading the bases.

Ritchie fanned pinch hitter Jim Coker for the second out, but Pinson ended his charmed life with a game-ending single.

Joe Torre had three hits for the Braves and drove in Atlanta's first two runs.

Dick Farrell, a former Astro, saved Dick Ellsworth's victory over Houston with 3 1-3 innings of relief.

Farrell allowed three hits and one run but shut off a Houston rally in the sixth when he relieved Ellsworth. The Phillies jumped in front with two runs in each of the first two innings against loser Chris Zachary, 0-6.

Ex-Dodger Maury Wills drove in Pittsburgh's tie-breaking run with a seventh inning triple as the Pirates stopped the Dodgers.

Wills, playing in Los Angeles for the first time since being traded, had two hits and scored twice for the Pirates.

The Dodgers jumped off to a 3-0 lead but Roberto Clemente, who drove in two runs with a pair of hits, and Wills brought the Pirates back.

As the too - bright son said: "Maybe hard work never killed anyone, but I'll bet you never heard of anybody who rested to death."

Blodgett Upsets New Hamburg

Blodgett scored a major upset in the opening round of the softball association tournament last night, defeating New Hamburg Schindler, 1-0. In the other game last night, Kelso edged Oran 1-0.

Eight teams are entered in the tournament with the winner re-serving the right to advance to the state playoffs.

Tonight's action at the Kelso field will see the number two seeded squad, Benton Aces meeting the Bell City nine.

Blodgett's defensively minded softball nine beat the Schindler's and two of the leading softball pitchers in the state, John Watkins and Gilbert Robert, 1-0 on two fielding errors and a sacrafice fly by Alvin Farrenburg.

Watkins pitched the first four innings, allowing only one hit and one run before being lifted in the fourth for reliefer Gilbert Robert, who pitched hitless balls for the remainder of the game, but the harm had already been done.

Larry Cooper scored the only run of the game, that being for Blodgett. An over throw at first advanced him to second and a wild pitch to third before a sacrifice fly by Alvin Farrenburg sent the lead run home.

The win was Blodgett's fifth of the season against two losses.

Marion Oakley was the winning pitcher, going the seven inning stunt, allowing three hits, no runs, and one walk.

New Hamburg hurlers gave up no walks.

Blodgett will mett Kelso Sunday evening at 9 p.m. for their next tournament game. New Hamburg and Oran advanced into the losers bracket.

Hill Carries 4-Stroke Lead In Memphis Open

By BOB GILBERT
Associated Press Sports Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Hill would like nothing better than to be a copycat— to match Dave Stockton's pattern of success two weeks ago— and he is halfway there.

Hill, a powerful tee shot artist from Jackson, Mich., carried a four-stroke lead into today's third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament. He had a 9-under-par 131.

That was the margin Stockton held in the same round when he won the Colonial Invitation at Fort Worth, Tex. In fact, Hill has shot a 65-66 here as did Stockton at Fort Worth, Tex. The weather is even similar.

"Dave had a super game out there, and so far in this tournament I've played my best golf this year— my best 36 holes since I won the Denver Open in 1961," Hill said.

Challenging Hill as the third round began were three players tied with 5-under-par 135s— Gary Player, Bruce Crampton and Chuck Courtney.

For Player, who returned to the tour recently after six weeks at his ranch in South Africa, the past two weeks have been amazing. He played well in losing a playoff to Miller Barber last week at Oklahoma City.

Congressman Says Research Can Aid Cotton

SAN FRANCISCO -- The city of San Francisco is not only an ideal location for an annual meeting, but also a proper forum from which to speak about a topic which is of interest to us all. In California, cotton literally is king for as many of you here know, cotton is the largest money crop of all the various agricultural products that this great state grows to meet the expanding needs of our nation.

California is proud to say that it is supplying a type of cotton that is very much in demand, and we hope that we can continue to supply the mounting needs of the textile industry.

I fully realize that your association is made up of affiliated organizations who encompass the entire cotton belt of the United States, ranging from the tip of Southern Virginia, throughout the southern states, the southwest and the far west. Each of these areas to a great degree produces a type of cotton which is unique in quality from region to region. United States mills demand a type of cotton with a long and strong fiber possessing good quality factors.

Most of the states, in the cotton belt can say with pride that they do produce a type of cotton which is of high quality and can be sold in the market place. I feel that each of you whose livelihood depends upon the marketing of cotton will agree to the basic proposition that you cannot sell cotton for which there is no demand.

Here is California our cotton producers have justifiable pride in the type of crop they grow and hopefully the basis for this pride will continue.

The American Cotton Shippers Association is to be congratulated for its progressive views with regard to their long standing demand for the encouragement of the production of good quality cotton and the discouragement of cotton which serves no other use than to fill up space in government warehouses throughout the cotton belt.

I wholeheartedly agree with the position you have constantly urged upon the United States Department of Agriculture for increased acreage in areas where good quality cotton is grown. I, along with each and every one of you, was unhappy when the department of agriculture did not lift the skip-row planting restrictions for the 1967-68 crop year. This, I am afraid, was a great mistake and the very nature of such a decision is hard to understand in light of the acute shortage of cotton of an inch and longer.

The latest statistics from the Commodity Credit Corporation show that there are about 2,000,000 bales of this type of cotton in CCC warehouses and this figure is diminishing rapidly.

Recent heavy rainfall in the San Joaquin Valley in the area between Bakersfield and Merced will reduce yields to the point that it is doubtful that there will be enough long staple cotton for domestic mills. It has been estimated that this year's crop in the area will be reduced by possibly 50,000 bales.

Another threat to the California producer is posed by the pink bollworm which already has had its affect on the quality and yield of Arizona cotton and California cotton south of the Tehachapis.

I would like to commend the initative taken by the Western Cotton Growers Association through the support of the state assembly of California for levying upon themselves a 50 cents per bale charge to be used for pink bollworm eradication program. The state of California and the federal government will provide matching funds for this program. This is an excellent example of cooperation by private enterprise and state and federal government. In intend to work vigorously for the $1,200,000 appropriation required at the federal level for the fight against the pink bollworm infestation in this state.

Unless we want to see the textile industry continue its pattern of substituting man-made fibers for cotton, we must develop a program that enables areas which grow good staple cotton of a high quality to produce to their fullest potential. Those areas which produce cotton that ends up in government warehouses on a permanent basis should be encouraged to grow better quality cotton or switch to another type of agricultural product.

This year's loan values and grade differentials which discourage low quality cotton, should be continued. These measures indicate a realization of the fact that American agriculture has undergone a tremendous change. The small farm is being consolidated into the large farm. The margin of profit is being constantly reduced. Capital outlays for necessary farm equipment are rising. One of the purposes of the Agriculture Adjustment Act of 1965 was to reduce non-productive cotton acreage.

Today cotton is at its crossroads. Through technological advances and efficient and well-financed promotional campaign, the manufacturers of man-made fiber products are taking markets away from cotton fabric producers. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act of 1965 which your associated actively supported is a new and imaginative program which has the potential to bring about increased utilization of cotton. The active support of all agricultural organizations is needed, however, to insure the future success of this venture.

The cotton merchants and other first buyers, as I understand, have been delegated by the Cotton Board, established by this legislation, to act as the collectors of the one dollar per bale from the cotton producer. I realize that this will most likely pose an extra burden upon you as individuals, but your full support and cooperation can guarantee in the long-run the success of this program which hopefully can be measured in profits for the entire cotton community.

The cotton industry is to be complimented for meeting head on the competitive threats posed by man-made fibers. You have accepted the challenge. You are moving forward. You have realized that progress cannot be achieved without the application of scientific research and the development of new processes for the growing treatment and spinning of cotton. Continued research and active promotion of the fruits of this research can hopefully re-establish cotton as the primary fiber used by the textile industry.

An equally and sometimes seemingly insoluble problem is the establishment of price rates which will make United States cotton competitive in the world market. Many of us in congress had hoped that the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 would provide the framework to help United States cotton re-capture its rightful place in world trade. Our great expectations are yet to be realized and hopefully United States cotton prices can be established at competitive levels.

With the passage of the agricultural act of 1965 congress gave the secretary the vehicle through which he can help to expand United States cotton and other agricultural experts if implemented properly. I believe that the secretary should abide by the intent of congress to lower cotton prices and expand exports.

The United States government is faced with many commitments throughout the world and in our eagerness to make friends among the emerging nations. Perhaps sufficient thought was not given to the fact that the United States production of cotton could be placed in jeopardy by these well-intentioned commitments.

Earlier this year, more self-help by India was urged by the congress while approving emergency food assistance. Last year I visited India and saw for myself the hunger and suffering caused by a shortage of food. The need for increased productivity of food crops in India is undeniable. The Indian government has lowered prices on food crops and has encouraged the production of non-food crops. This coupled with a population explosion and a severe drought has resulted in mass starvation.

One answer to this problem is to encourage India to produce more food on cropland now devoted to non-food crops in world surplus. India is presently growing about 20,000,000 acres of cotton or nearly double the acreage being grown in the United States. Yet, India's yield per acre is less than one-fourth of the yield in this country. However, India's wheat productivity per acre is about 45 per cent that of the United States. According to the department of agriculture: "From a physical and scientific standpoint -- virtually every acre of land now producing cotton could produce crops used for food or feed." The United States with a cotton surplus, can supply India with cotton, thus helping both nations.

The United States balance of payments has reached an intolerable level and unfortunately the importation of foreign textiles and yarns comprise the larger part of this imbalance. President Johnson is aware of this acute problem and every member of congress is hopeful that a sound and justifiable solution can be reached by our trade negotiations.

Your very attendance, your association's willingness to come forth with logical ideas to propose to the federal government on the topics which I have briefly touched on is a tribute to your energy, ingenuity and leadership in the cotton industry.

I am happy that for the most part I share your views and I will do my best to help you achieve these worthwhile objectives.

Flagpole Tragedy Likened to Famed Iwo Jima Scene

SPRINGFIELD, Va. (AP) — A witness said it was like the famous Marine flag-raising at Iwo Jima.

Except this time it was six Army enlisted men raising the flag pole. And instead of a battle-pocked hill on a distant island, the scene was a Little League baseball field in a Washington suburb.

Then the 40-foot metal pole swayed. The six soldiers strained, trying to hold it in place.

But the pole toppled, hitting a 7,200-volt power line. Electricity crackled down the pole, spitting and hissing in blue and white flashes.

The six soldiers fell dead in the mud, their clothes smoking, some of them burned almost beyond recognition.

The Army identified the six soldiers, all assigned to the community assistance project from Ft. Belvoir, Va., as: Pvt. Charles P. Oliver, Vermilion, Ohio; Spec. 4 Kenneth G. Steiner, St. Ann, Mo.; Pvt. Marvin D. Harrison, Jacksonville, Fla.; Pvt. Paul D. Briggs, Waco, Tex.; Pvt. Anthony B. Evans, Uniontown, Pa.; Pvt. Charles M. Whaleyn, Aberdeen, Ohio.

"It looked like that group in the Iwo Jima statue," said 16-year-old Bob Ramey, who witnessed the midafternoon tragedy.

Because the ground was wet, would-be rescuers, including four other Ft. Belvoir soldiers in the 10-man work party, were warned away from the accident scene until the power could be cut off.

Dr. William Enos, a Virginia medical examiner, said the men all died virtually instantly.

The victims had been part of a detail working all week to ready the Little League field near the Army base. It was for use by teams of youngsters from Ft. Belvoir and surrounding suburban areas.

Ann Landers Visits An Evacuation Hospital

BY SAUL LOCKHART AND JOHN DONNELLY

Special to The Sun-Times

QUI NHON, Vietnam - In the emergency ward of the 85th Evacuation Hospital here, a wounded soldier of the 1st Cavalry (Air-Mobile) Division was being prepared for operation. As a medic cut away his muddy fatigues and a nurse prepared him for a transfusion, a woman, in a basic-black cocktail dress watched the soldier's face. He looked up, then stared uncomprehendingly into Ann Landers' eyes - probably certain that she was an illusion.

She really was there, though, touring the hospitals of Vietnam, talking to as many men as she could; joshing, gently chiding, laughing with the wounded of this war. She saw the walking wounded and the near dead, the silent, frequently comatose GIs in the intensive care units and the humorists in the convalescent wards.

Story Of A Headache

At the 67th Evacuation Hospital, also in Qui Nhon, she asked a soldier with a turban of white gauze wrapped around his head:

"What happened to you, fella?"

"I gotta headache," replied Pfc. Francis McCloskey of Johnstown, Pa.

"How did you get a headache?.. asked Miss Landers in straightman fashion.

"When a bullet hit it," came the reply.

The columnist joined the rest of the ward in laughter.

Officially, Miss Landers was on a hand-shaking tour arranged by the USO; and she conducted herself like a trouper: Most VIP tourists in Vietnam stick to a schedule, 10 or 15 minutes to a ward, two or three hours to a battle zone. But Miss Landers visited virtually every bed in every ward, talking to each patient for as long as he cared or had the strength to.

She Meets A Surgeon

In the back of Ward 5 of the 85th Evacuation Hospital, is a small area where on duty medical personnel gather to talk and unwind. Against a wall, a surgeon, his eyes tired and harried under the green operating cap, leaned drinking black coffee and smoking a cigaret.

An officer accompanying Miss Landers volunteered the information that "he hasn't had his boots off in 48 hours," and still had to operate on the newly arrived patients. She asked the doctor about it.

"We're getting the overflow from the Eye Corps," he replied laconally, Eye Corps is what people in Vietnam call the 1st Corps Area, the northernmost military sector, where GI's have been fighting some of the war's most bitter and costly battles in and around the demilitarized zone.

'Seen Enough Bodies'

"You're doing a magnificient job, doctor," said Miss Landers.

"I've seen enough bodies," the surgeon replied.

"How long have you got left?" she asked.

"Twenty three days and a wake-up." In Vietnam, privates are not the only ones who keep track of their last days, and even surgeons refuse to count their last morning as a full day.

"When you get back to the States and think back on this, you'll realize what a wonderful job you've all been doing," Miss Landers said.

"When I get back to the States," said the doctor, "I'll try to forget everything that has happened."

In Vietnam, some people no longer can be impressed, either by celebrities or by themselves. Outside the ward, Miss Landers turned to the hospital's executive officer and said simply: "What can you say to men like that? They're simply magnificent."

The Prison Ward

Another ward was surrounded with barbed wire and guarded by MP's. "What is that?" she asked.

The prisoner ward, she was told. Walking through the ward, she smiled compassionately at the wounded. Some stared sullenly back, but others smiled in reply. It is doubtful that many of the VC knew of Ann Landers, but a smile has been known to work wonders.

Swathed from head to toe in bandages, with one leg in traction, S-Sgt. Antonio Milstead of Harlingen, Tex., grinned up at Miss Landers.

"The worst is over," Milstead said, "besides, I'm one of the lucky ones."

Miss Landers, eyeing the sizable percentage of his body that was bandaged, asked incredulously: "How's that?"

"Well," said Milstead, "I only got four months 'til I get out of the Army. The way I'm wounded, it'll take me that long to recover. Now that poor guy over there," he nodded toward a sleeping figure three beds away, "he's only got two weeks to go. He'll be healing on his own time."

"What fantastic spirit," Miss Landers mused later, "a guy walking around with a bullet hole in his head, and he's got a 'headache.' And Milstead is concerned only that he convalesce on Uncle Sam's time and not on his own."

Under Close Guard

Leaving a ward, Miss Landers noticed for the first time the MPs who had shadowed her everytime she had been outside all day.

"Who," she asked, "are they?"

"That's your security, Ma'am," replied an officer. "Today is Ho Chi Minh's birthday."

That night, Miss Landers stayed at the house of the commanding general of the Qui Nhon support command. An MP was stationed on the balcony outside her window. The next morning, flying to visit another hospital at Cam Ranh Bay, armed helicopters flew escort. It is all part of being a celebrity in Vietnam, and must be borne.

Miss Landers undoubtedly has gained more than just an appreciation of GI humor, or a knowledge of what war can do to men. In the space of 12 hours, she visited more than 500 men in two hospitals, and they left their mark. Earlier, as she had watched wounded men being wheeled to the operating tables, she had mused, almost to herself: "There must be a better way. There must be a better way."

It was something she said to herself again and again during her stay in this war-torn land.

English Tramp, French Playboy One and Same

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Julian Ellis-Morris dressed like a tramp and sold razor blades, shampoo and soap door to door in this resort on the west coast of England.

But in Paris the gray-haired old Englishman was a wealthy eccentric who lavished chocolates, flowers and cigarettes on two girls at the Folies Bergere.

When he died in March at 75, he left a fortune of $174,697 including $2,800 to the two Parisian entertainers.

He bequeathed $1,400 each to Micheline Roine and Nicole Delattre, $140 to Michelina's daughter Danielle and $350 each to the unnamed women owners of two Montmartre hotels where he stayed during his jaunts in the French capital.

The double life of Ellis-Morris was revealed Wednesday when his will was published.

Dressed in an old army overcoat and tattered canvas shoes, he went from house to house selling cheap toilet goods from a tray.

At night he returned to a luxurious bungalow where he had three television sets and two automobiles, including a chauffeur-driven Daimler limousine. He vacationed at Nice, Cannes and Paris.

During World War II he swept the floors at an aircraft factory.

He kept his private life secret, though he once told friends that when Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip visited Blackpool he was invited to meet them aboard the royal train.

Once, he said, the Prince of Wales — now the Duke of Windsor — sent a message to his table as he dined in London.

According to his death certificate, Ellis-Morris was the son of a London auctioneer.

"He looked like a tramp and talked about being skint (broke)" said Johnny Miller, the steward at a Blackpool Working Men's Club.

Yet he was a regular customer— seat A15 — for 15 years at the Folies Bergere. Each night he sent chocolates, flowers and cigarettes backstage to Micheline Roine and Nicole Delattre.

When the shy old man plucked up courage to meet them he and the girls became close friends.

His closest friends were in the Salvation Army. He stayed at its hostels and attended its services every Sunday.

He left the biggest part of his money, $98,000, to Annie Graves, a 36-year-old Salvation Army worker.

"I am surprised as anyone," said Miss Graves. "I only used to talk to him and ask him how he was."

U THANT'S BIAS

In tracing the roots of the Middle East crisis, informed citizens can hardly fail to observe that U Thant, Secretary General of the United Nations, precipitated one of the worst developments in the situation.

This was Mr. U Thant's immediate, affirmative response to Egypt's demand for withdrawal of the U. N. peace-keeping force from positions along the Israeli border. It was not necessary for U Thant to take this action, for the peace-keeping force had been created by the U. N. General Assembly and not by the Secretary General himself. With this sudden, irresponsible action, U Thant opened the door to direct action to Col. Nasser of Egypt.

For example, with the almost overnight withdrawal of the U.N. troops, Nasser was able to send troops to blockade the narrow straits which control Israel's access to the Red Sea and its markets in Africa and Asia. Automatically, war tension was increased.

Western peoples should not overlook U Thant's strange behavior. In the past the Burmese neutralist who heads the bureaucratic machinery of the U. N. has gone all out to assert the U.N.'s authority in international disputes. But he made no such assertion of authority against the Egyptians, who are sponsored by the Soviet Union. He didn't even attempt to delay an action that was bound to promote the communist goal of stirring trouble in the oil-rich Middle East.

U Thant's action in the Israeli-Egyptian crisis is in striking contrast to his actions and statements with regard to the war in Vietnam. The U. N. Secretary General has used his office to try to bend the United States to his will, virtually adopting Hanoi's position on the aerial bombing and suggesting that the U. S., by its air raids against the Red regime, was on the verge of starting World War III.

U Thant's behavior, in this and other situations, gives abundant evidence of where his sympathies lie. Nasser's Egypt, of course, is one of the revolutionary states of the world. It is very close to the communist bloc countries. Nasser desires to oust the Western countries from their oil concessions in the Middle East, a goal which U Thant undoubtedly shares.

The bias U Thant has shown toward the Egyptians is all the more graphically illustrated by the failure of his office -- and of the Afro-Asian bloc in the U.N. --to pay any attention to other threats to the peace in the Middle East. Since the early 1960s, Egypt has had 50,000 soldiers occupying the little Red Sea country of Yemen, but U Thant and the U. N. have not condemned Egypt's aggression there.

For many months, Egyptian agents, infiltrators and saboteurs have been conducting a terrorist war against the vital British naval-air base of Aden at the southern end of the Red Sea and against the South Arabian Federation. But the U. N. persists in seeing no evil.

A three-man U. N. team visited Adan this spring, but refused to even consult with South Arabian Federation officials -- the lawful authorities in the area. U Thant had no word of reproach for the U. N.'s emissaries. He was too busy trying to pressure the United States into backing down before the forces of aggression in Southeast Asia. In another situation, involving Syrian sabotage raids, the U. N Secretary General was equally blind to aggression by a pro-communist country.

U Thant's position is understandable, in one sense. No doubt his sympathies are in line with the policies of the majority of countries in the United Nations organization. The more than 100 countries in the U.N., after all are largely nations from the communist world or the so-called Third World of backward, neutralist nations. Thus the majority of states in the U. N. fall into one of two classes: (1) communist or openly pro-communist nations, or (2) nations which envy America and want to penalize the U. S. for its affluence. Many of the new nations of Africa, which are so numerous in the U. N., belong to the second group.

The United Nations talks peace, but the U.N.'s definition of peace invariably is one which benefits the enemies of freedom. "Peace" for U Thant means Western withdrawal at every point and accommodation to the demands of the revolutionary states and movements. In short, U Thant's career as Secretary General clearly illustrates his anti-Western outlook -- an outlook which he clearly shares with the majority of states in the U.N. organization.

Lake Yields Angler's Wallet 5 Years Later

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Five years ago Earl Hall, West Plains auctioneer, was fishing on a farm lake north of here.

He hooked a bass and turned over his canoe while trying to land his catch. The bass got away. Hall nearly drowned, and he lost his billfold which contained $500 in cash and several hundred dollars in checks.

For several days he and others dragged the lake. Divers spent hours on the bottom of the lake. They had no luck. Neither did people who came to the lake to fish for the cash rather than the bass.

Among those who did not forget the event of five years ago was Elmer Killion, West Plains. While fishing there this week he spotted a large leather billfold floating near some weeds. He retrieved it and discovered it was the one lost by Hall.

The chain had rusted off, but the money was intact, although a little darker green. Also intact were the uncashed checks.

Hall was advised by his banker to send the bills to the Federal reserve bank in St. Louis to be replaced.

Anti-Outsider Group Plays up Rain Image

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A car dealer has organized a "We Love Rain Society" aimed at keeping out-of-staters out of Washington.

The dealer, Dick Lewis, said Wednesday the idea is to cut down on the state's population growth by pushing the image that it rains a lot in Washington.

He said society members are instructed not to mail any sunny pictures out of the state, always wear a raincoat, and hide all bathing suits, sports shirts, sunglasses and sun tan lotion.

Federal Debt Reduced by $197 Gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal debt is $1.97 lower thanks to a high school government class.

Class members took up a collection and sent their check to the Treasury Department to help retire the debt which by comparison to their contribution is staggering— about $328 billion.

The class donation went into a special fund for debt retirement which will celebrate its sixth anniversary this month and probably will reach its first million dollars within the next year.

The fund isn't designed to wipe out the entire debt. It's simply a handy place for debt-retiring gifts.

Through April 30, the special fund had collected $909,066.82, most of it from the will of the late Susan Vaughan Clayton of Houston, Tex. She willed half the income from a trust fund to the federal government to help retire the debt.

She and Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., sponsor of the legislation which created the special fund, are the only donors of record. Bennett contributed the first $1,000. The Treasury Department declined to identify other donors— including the government class.

Donations since last July 1 totaled $93,173.84 and ran from one shilling— 14 cents— to $90,618.33 from the Clayton trust fund.

Before the special fund was created, the Treasury tossed any debt contributions into its general fund.

The $1.97 donation was accompanied by a brief note which merely said the money was to be used to reduce the debt.

Another young contributor apparently was alarmed by the size of the debt.

"I thought the least I could do (because I am too young to pay taxes) would be to save a little for our Treasury Department," he wrote. "So here is my contribution. I know it isn't much but if everyone pays a little we just might get out of our debts."

Phone Tip Leads to Missing Woman's Boby

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP)— The body of Mrs. Peggy Vogt, 17, of East St. Louis, Ill., was found by sheriff's deputies in St. Clair County Friday after they received a call from a lawyer who said his client knew where the body of a missing woman would be found.

The lawyer told authorities his client said he "held his hand over her mouth too long."

The body was found in a wooded area near a road junction at Cahokia, Ill. It was badly decomposed. Identification was made through the contents of a purse found nearby.

Mrs. Vogt's husband, Robert, is serving in Germany with the U.S. Army. She lived with her parents who reported her missing May 22 after she didn't return home after going out for a hamburger with a young man.

Investigators have located the lawyer but have not said if they have located the client.

Of Interest to Homemakers

BY
FREDERICKA PLUMMER
Extension Area Home Economist

CHARLESTON -- The June list of plentiful foods includes eggs, orange juice, potatoes, dry beans, beef, milk, and dairy products.

Want to cut your food bills -- and still provide your family with nutritious, well-balanced meals?

Your greatest money savers may be substitution of nonfat dry milk for fluid milk and the use of less costly meats. Make more use of stew beef, ground beef, salt pork, sausage, chicken, and fish.

Dry beans and peanut butter are inexpensive sources or protein. Other tips: Use cooked cereals and fresh potatoes, and cut down on seasonings and soft drinks.

Right now dry beans are on the plentiful food list and prices are especially reasonable.

When combining beaten egg whites with other ingredients, use a folding, not a stirring motion. Mix only enough to blend ingredients well.

Army Drafts Cotton to Serve Young Americans

HOUSTON, Tex. -- The tiny cotton boll, which makes such an important contribution to the agricultural economy of the El Paso, Texas, area also serves thousands of young Americans in the United States Army.

From the cotton swab to the canteen cover to the hospital tent, the U.S. Army Air Defense Center at Fort Bliss enlists the cotton boll and millions of his cousins for a local consumption rate that provides more than $1,000,000 a year for the cotton industry.

The cotton boll dons the Army olive green color at about the same time that the new recruit begins his tour of active duty. In his first week in the army, each new recruit receives 32 pounds of cotton in his clothing issue and another 22 pounds in the organizational equipment he is issued, such as duffel bags and pup tents.

While Fort Bliss receives nearly 1,000 new recruits each week of the year, the army must "draft" many times that number of cotton bolls to make up the 54 pounds of cotton that will accompany the soldier for nearly the rest of his active military career.

It takes more than 100 bales of cotton to supply the needs of the new recruits each week, and a cotton bale weighs approximately 500 pounds. The cost averages $19,044 worth of cotton each week. Each cotton bale will supply enough fiber to outfit nine soldiers with a complete set of clothes and equipment.

In the regular army issue, cotton can be found in such obvious items as undershirts and drawers, and such obscure items as tentage and line, issued at a rate of 11,000 annually.

Some other items containing cotton in their annual issue includes socks and neckties, 356,158; handkerchiefs, 359,055; cotton khaki trousers and shirts, 371,074; and baseball, field and service caps, 184,692. All total 5,488,063 items containing cotton are issued annually.

It is evident from these figures that not all cotton leaving the El Paso area ends up as bright colored fabrics for sport shirts or in a copy of the latest Paris gown. While military service may not be the most glamorous assignment for cotton, it is no less significant.

From the first Army uniforms to the latest in Army dress, and from the American flag to the simple arm patch worn by every soldier, the cotton boll has woven a fundamental place for itself in the United States Army. -- Information Office, U. S. Army Air Defense Center, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Low Prices to Farmers Could Elevate Food Costs

CHICAGO -- Will supply and demand force us to pay more for food?

It's almost magical the way in which supply and demand determine market prices. Nobody seems to have anything to do with it. Prices are somehow forced down when buyers want less than sellers offer.

This rather vague explanation is the way economics text books describe the interesting process so often glibly referred to as the "law of supply and demand". One economics text states the law is a "statement of tendencies toward an equilibrium position in which the amount offered for sale will just be taken off the market." The truth of this is becoming increasingly evident in the food industry.

Says C. O. Emrich, Norfolk, Neb., chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board: "Should the farm price situation fail to improve in keeping with the rest of the economy, more farmers will leave agriculture. This could cause a jump in food prices far beyond any this country has ever experienced; because, despite the efficiencies of modern agriculture, a steady exodus of farmers will eventually mean less food. And scarce items cost more money."

Prices received by farmers in 1966 were two percent below the 1947-49 average. At the same time, farm costs reached a new all-time peak of $33.2 billion. Farmers last year were still about $900 short of equality with the rest of the economy, on a par capita income basis, despite a 76 percent increase in per-acre productivity since 1920.

Current agricultural thinking indicates a trend away from government payments to farmers and recognition of the concept of farming and ranching as progressive business operations rather than a traditionalized "way of life". To stay in business farmers must have an adequate return on their investment and labor. Otherwise, they are forced to leave the farm, which many already have done.

In 1910, 35 percent of total U.S. population lived on farms. Now, less than seven percent live on farms and feed the rest of the nation as well as a good part of the world. By 1970, it is estimated that only five percent will live on farms.

Max E. Brunk, professor of marketing, Cornell University, declares that farmers are "no longer captives of an agrarian economy which offered only the opportunity of farming or starving. Farmers today have alternative employment opportunities. Either the farm will get a price that will more than cover his input costs or he will shift to other, more profitable pursuits."

Brunk adds: "In my opinion we have seen the end of long periods of depressed agricultural prices and our 'ladycotters' are going to have to face this as a reality of life."

How to Harvest All Wheat Grown

By J. W. James
Extension Agent

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Every year after wheat harvest we see the "tell tale evidence" of volunteer wheat to indicate improper operation and adjustment of the combine.

Ed J. Constein, University of Missouri agricultural engineer, indicates here some things to do to get the wheat combine into proper adjustment.

1. Proper adjustment of a combine will result in lower field losses and better quality grain. Most of our wheat, according to U.S.D.A. grades is No. 2 Soft Winter Wheat. Such wheat has a mimimum test weight of 58.0 pounds per bushel. It has a maximum of not over 2 percent heat damaged kernels, 4 percent damaged kernels; 1 percent foreign material; 5 percent shrunken and broken kernels; total defects 5 percent; and not over 5 percent of wheat of other classes.

2. Combine operating speed is a key factor in good combine performance. A combine is designed to do its best work when operating at the specific speed stated in the operator's manual. Normally the engine speed determines the speed of all parts of the combine. This speed should be correct and run at a steady rate.

3. Use the operator's manual to set the combine before going to the field, then check the grain in the bin and for field losses after making a trial run.

4. If the combine is not doing a good job of threshing increase cylinder speed or reduce concave clearance. If it is overthreshing so straw is chewed up, increase concave clearance.

5. If there are big pieces of straw of heads in the grain bin close down the lower sieve a little. If there is light chaff in the grain bin increase the wind blast.

6. If there are cracked or skinned kernels have a look at the material in the tailings auger. This should contain pieces of heads but only a little grain. Excessive recirculation damages kernels. If there is a large amount of threshed grain in the tailing auger check the wind blast --it may be too high or directed too far to the rear or the lower adjustable sieve is closed too far.

7. If grain is being carried over with the straw, overloading may be the cause. Set the cutterbar as high as possible without leaving grain and reduce forward speed.

8. Check the threshed grain and check for field losses several times a day. Field conditions often change from one part of a field to another and moisture content often changes throughout the day.

One of the telegrams sent to the bride and groom at a wedding in Edinburgh read: "Enjoy yourselves. It's later on you'll think!"

FARM LABOR BULLETIN

STATE SUMMARY

Cold, wet weather cuts cotton acreage in Bootheel by 50 to 65%. Acreage will probably be planted in soybeans.

Some seasonal labor available for out-of-area work. Over 250 college youth recruited for Machine Operator - in - plant vegetable harvest in Wisconsin, Minnesota, Iowa and Washington.

109 unfilled year-round and 44 seasonal farm orders on hand.

30 year-round and 986 seasonal farm workers were placed last week. 15 VFPR placements were made and over 400 workers were sent to other local office areas, primarily for hoeing hybrid corn. Sikeston referred 157 workers to the Kentucky strawberry harvest last week. St. Louis reports recruitment underway for the Florida tomato harvest.

Last week's sunshine enabled farmers to nearly complete corn and bean planting over most of the state, first hay cutting was light with ample labor anticipated as schools close for summer vacation.

SOUTHEAST

Sikeston: 202 South Kingshighway - Telephone: Granite 1-2731

Growers still planting beans. Loss of cotton acreage more severe than previously estimated, however, most reliable sources now estimate approximately 50% of the allotted acreage will be salvaged. Local labor demands very light and growers selective. Some scattered chopping but primarily by on - farm workers. Movement of labor out of area waiting on employers in Great Lakes area.

Cape Girardeau: 231 North Main Street - Telephone: Edgewater 5-6666

Strawberry harvest about completed. No labor problems developed. Demand for qualified farm couples continues to be in excess of supply. Recruitment for cannery workers continues. All workers age 18-55 are urged to contact this office by June 15. Prospects for employment for summer farm jobs are excellent.

Poplar Bluff: 211 Pine Street - Telephone: Sunset 5 - 9606

Very little cotton will be planted in this area due to late rainy spring. Most of the cotton acreage will be planted to beans. Eight MDTA trainess have been referred to the new class at Marshall to begin on May 29.

West Plains: 111 Walnut Street - Telephone: 256-3158

Farm activity as warm weather has prevailed over the area. Have four farm hands for relocation with all four needing money to move. Have referred several youths for custom combine harvest crews in Kansas.

Kennett: 405 St. Francis Street - Telephone: Tuxedo 8-3184

The strawberry harvest was completed this weekend. Field chopping activity has been very limited to soybeans, corn and watermelons. Soybeans planting has been going at a rapid rate. Several farmers are planting cotton for the third time. An estimate of 60% of the cotton acreage damaged by recent rains will be diverted to soybeans. Many farmers are waiting to see what the cotton already up is going to do. The labor supply is good and no cotton to chop at this time. There will be some chopping within the next two weeks. Several youths are being interviewed with no jobs to offer.

Caruthersville: 112 West Fifth Street - Telephone: Edison 3-2416

Most farmers are switching from cotton to soybeans. Some are replanting or spot planting for the third time. The weather has been nice all during the week. An estimate of up to 65 to 70 percent of the cotton land will be planted in soybeans.

Weeds Show Up in Cotton

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Some hard to kill grass and weeds are now showing up in cotton fields according to Agricultural Extension Agent W. F. James. These can be controlled by the use of a number of different post emergent treatments.

1. Herbicidal oils can be applied on cotton 2-3 inches tall that is free from disease or mechanical injury. Four to five gallons per acre is applied on a ten inch band.

2. DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant as directed spray after cotton is three inches tall. Stop at first bloom. High temperatures needed for best results.

3. Karmex plus surfactant - after cotton is 6 inches tall - 0.3 lbs. of actual diuron per treated acre - 2 pints of surfactant in 50 gallons of spray mix.

4. Karmex plus DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant - cotton must be 6 inches tall. Stop at first bloom - 0.2 pound of actual diuron per treated acre - 3.0 lbs. DSMA or 2.0 pounds MSMA per treated acre.

5. Caparol plus surfactant plus DSMA or MSMA - on cotton 6 inches tall before grass or weeds are 2 inches tall. Use .5 or .6 lbs. of actual prometryne per treated acre plus same rates of DSMA or MSMA suggested above.

There are other chemicals or combination of chemicals which have label clearance that are not on our recommended list. These include Cotoran and Herban. Such chemicals have not been tested long enough under varying conditions by the University, so they could be placed on our recommended list.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By
Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Control of Government or Government Control

TO record the proceedings of the Senate and House of the 89th Congress required 55,326 printed pages.

Dr. Kershner

The Senate passed 1,968 measures, and the House 2,148. The total number of bills and resolutions introduced into the House and Senate during the 89th Congress reached the astronomical figure of 26,566.

No Congressman or Senator could read all of the bills introduced in any one Congress if he spent all his time at that task. Most of his time of course must be put in at committee hearings, attending sessions of the House or Senate and keeping in touch with his constituents. If you think your Senator or your Congressman does not always act intelligently, just remember that he does not have sufficient time to know even a small portion of what is going on in the House and Senate.

This underlines the fact that our government has grown so complex and so vast in its extent that men cannot comprehend it.

Free government is possible only if its functions are limited to a few essentials, such as are set forth in the Constitution of the United States — to provide for the common defense, conduct foreign relations, provide sound money including the minting of such coins as are necessary, maintaining standards for weights and measurements, preventing and punishing predation, and perhaps a minimum of public health and pure food measures, and the supervision of navigation in rivers and coastal waters.

All the rest should be left to the states or to the people as the Constitution says. In a governmen of limited scope and function, freedom is possible, for the people can understand it and control it. But when we allow it to expand to the present proportions, including the regulation of our economy, farming, banking, transportation, communication, schools, social security, and all the many activities of its citizens, it becomes so vast that the human mind cannot encompass it, and we lose control.

Lost Cropland Considered Diverted Acres

WASHINGTON -- The department of agriculture is changing its procedures so that farmers whose 1967 cotton and feed grain crops have failed may be eligible to have acres planted in these crops be considered diverted acres.

The department authorizes county committees to designate as diverted acreage land on which cotton or feed grains were planted but failed and which is classified as cotton or feed grain for purposes of price support payments.

Under the new rule the county committee would determine:

(1) That the cotton or feed grain was planted in a workmanlike manner.

(2) That the residue of a chemical used as a weed control makes it impractical to devote the land to subsequent crops for harvest in the current year.

(3) That the farm operator requests that the acreage be classified as cotton or as feed grain for purposes of price support payments and also be designated as diverted acreage.

(4) That the land designated as diverted will be treated throughout the current year in a manner acceptable for diverted acreage in the area.

Today's announcement is of special importance to Southeast Missouri cotton farmers whose crops are being ruined by heavy rains and flooding.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: As I sit here waiting for my adulterous husband to come home (usually between 3:00 AM and 6:00 AM) I feel compelled to write an answer to the Bronxville tramp who is mad because people don't look more kindly on "the other woman."

The Bronxville tramp said every married man who winds up in the arms of another woman is there because the other woman can give him something his wife cannot give him -- namely a keen appreciation for life and the good things it has to offer. The dumbbell doesn't realize her chief attraction is sex, with no responsibilities. You can be sure if she makes any demands on that married man he'll drop her like a hot potato.

I am sick of asking myself, "Where did I fail?" I can truthfully say I did my damnedest, but no woman can make a marriage work by herself. It was my husband who failed. And he failed because he was too immature and too weak to accept the responsibilities of a husband and father.

I know you will not print my letter because you are pro-male, and furthermore it has a cuss word in it, so that can be your excuse. -- GETTING LATE IN DALLAS

Dear Dallas: Here's your letter and a good one it is -- cuss word and all. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: The biggest mistake of my life was agreeing to go steady with Jake. Now I am fed up with him and his possessive ways but I just can't get him to leave me alone.

I told Jake two weeks ago that I wanted to call it quits. He bawled his head off and I didn't have the heart to go through with it. Saturday I told him again that I just had to be free to date others and that he should stop calling me. He said if I quit going with him he would become mentally disturbed and flunk out of school and become a bum.

I don't want to be responsible for the ruination of a person's life but I really am bugged by this guy's pestiness and I need to know what to do - TOO LOVABLE

Dear Love: Bid him farewell and make it a positive statement -- not the first sentence of a debate. Too many girls are flattered by a boy's persistence, so they encourage him to keep hanging around by being less than emphatic. Could you be one of those?

Dear Ann Landers: My parents are driving me crazy. I am not a teen-ager, I'm a married woman with kids of my own.

Dad has been seeing some gold-digger for five years. Every day Mother screams at him about cancelled checks made out to cash. She accuses him of spending the money on a floozy and he denies it. (I am sure she is right.) Dad is 62 years old, in poor health and nothing to look at. The only thing he could possibly do for a woman would be to give her money.

In all fairness I must say Dad pays the bills and doesn't embarrass the family by being seen in public with anyone. He has warned Mother to stop nagging him and reading to him from the scriptures or he will leave.

I think she should accept the situation and settle for what she has. What do you say? -- FED

The Prayer
From The Upper Room

Jesus said to him (Peter), "Feed my sheep." (John 21:17, RSV)

PRAYER: Dear God, as we look around us, we see and hear many things which tend to lead people in the direction of sinful purposes rather than to Thee. Deepen our spiritual convictions so that we can pass on to our fellow brethen the good tidings Christ brought to earth. In His name we pray. Amen.

DECLARES DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Interstate Bakeries Corporation at a meeting Wednesday (May 31, 1967) in Chicago, Illinois declared the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on common stock and $1.20 per share on preferred stock both payable June 30, 1967 to stockholders of record June 12, 1967. The board also approved a plan for issuance of 100 per cent common stock dividend.

The proposed plan will be presented to stockholders at a special meeting in Kansas City, Missouri on July 20, 1967 stated Ernest B. Hueter, president. Stockholders of record June 12, 1967 will be entitled to vote. If the present level of earnings is maintained, the board anticipates that the plan would result in an annual cash rate of 90 cents a share on common stock outstanding after 100 per cent stock dividend. Present annual rate is $1.60 a share paid 40 cents quarterly on the 1,034,081 common shares outstanding.

Stockholders will be asked to approve the issuance of 3,000,000 additional shares of common for possible use in future acquisitions, as well as accommodate the requirements for the 100 per cent dividend, bringing total authorized common to 5,000,000 shares.

Pending stockholder approval, the board intends to distribute the additional common stock certificates reflected by the 100 per cent dividend in August.

The dividend declaration follows the highest per share earnings performance in the history of the year based on present shares outstanding. For the period ended April 22, 1967, IBC reported net income of $1,019,145 or 97 cents per share, up 20 per cent from $848,316 or 81 cents, for the corresponding period in 1966. Sales in the period rose 5 per cent to a record high of $58,933,534 compared with $56,114,257 in the similar 1966 period.

For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1966, Interstate's net income totaled $4,032,192 or $3.87 per share compared with $3,890,548 or $3.51 per share for the previous year. Sales climbed from $173,222,920 in 1965 to $191,933,205 last year.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE FANCIFUL FATHER

One bright and sunny Saturday afternoon, Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith decided to engage in a little touch-tackle football game with their kids in the street. After a few minutes, the pot-bellied Mr. Jones began to fancy himself an All-American. Stepping back, he heaved a long pass to the pot-bellied Mr. Smith. Chasing it with outstretched arms as if he were singing "Mammy!", Mr. Smith inadvertently crashed into comely Connie as she was crossing the street.

Tossed for a substantial loss, Connie sued pass-thrower Mr. Jones for her injuries.

"What's she suing me for?" Mr. Jones questioned in court. "Smitty ran into her, not me."

"I'm suing him because he was careless in throwing the ball in my vicinity," retorted Connie. "While I may have had passes thrown in my direction before, they've never had anything to do with football."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold Old-American Mr. Jones responsible for Connie's injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that throwing a football is not, in and of itself, a negligent act. While Mr. Jones may have thrown the football in Connie's vicinity, the judge noted, he had no control over Mr. Smith and, logically, had no reason to expect him to run into and collide with her; that Mr. Smith was the master of his course and not Mr. Jones.

TODAY'S LEGAL OPINION

When making a will, don't assume somebody else will die before you do. Many estates get all fouled up because a wife is convinced that she will outlive her husband or vice versa. When such an assumption proves erroneous, the estate is sometimes required to be distributed in a fashion never contemplated by the deceased person.

Rep Tony Heckemeyer Reports

JEFFERSON CITY -- This week a great many bills have been perfected and passed by the Missouri general assembly, but the most significant thing of interest is something which has not even happened yet but probably will burst into light next week.

The reapportionment committee has drawn our present 10th district in such a manner as to include Texas county, the home of U.S. Rep. Dick Ichord, who will almost certainly be a candidate for the congressman from the 10th district should this bill be accepted.

It is felt by many this would be a bad situation. To superimpose a congressman upon the 10th district from another district could hardly be said to give our people adequate representation, although Missouri is rather good at this sort of move. I expect the proposed reapportionment will develop into the donnybrook of the year. The battle lines are already forming and the allies will be very strange indeed. It appears for instance, that the bootheel will be aligned with certain elements of the city republican group and the Negro faction from St. Louis County and City. It should be very interesting to observe your House during this next month. I shall do my best to keep you posted on the happenings. I will mention a few of the many bills which were passed.

House bill 872 was passed which will allow any school board by a special levy to supply the transportation costs of students residing in the district to and from state colleges and universities which they are attending. You can see, this might, should the school board desire, provide a daily bus from Sikeston to Cape college for students who wish to avail themselves of the service. Again I say this is permissive and will happen only where the people want this service.

House bill 555 was passed which will allow the state board of education to grant a provisional teaching certificate for five academic years to a person holding a bachelors degree and three hours credit in courses relating to educational psychology and three hours or more credit in courses relating to techniques or methods of teaching and some practice teaching. This perhaps will alleviate some of the teaching pressure in our junior and senior high schools.

House bill 433 was passed which will allow any city of the state to provide a pension system for its employees.

If you have any further questions please write me.

HERE IS GOOD NEWS

St. Louis, May 31, 1967 -- The appeal of 10,000 employees of the McDonnell Douglas Corporation for a vote on the elimination of the compulsory "union shop" clause from their collective bargaining agreement was hailed here today by the president of Missourians for Right to Work.

Richard P. Borage, an official of a St. Louis manufacturing firm, said: "This striking development at the McDonnell Douglas Corporation is another manifestation of the spreading rank-and-file revolt against union complusion. It will hasten the adoption of a Missouri Right to Work Law by either legislative action or a vote of the people."

The Right to Work spokesman emphasized that the petitioning employees "are now compelled, as a condition of continued employment, to pay dues, fees and assessments to Local 837 of the International Association of Machinists.

"If a majority of the corporation's workers vote to eliminate the 'union shop' provision," he continued, "the payment of tribute to the union will no longer be a mandatory condition of employment.

"These employees would not be obliged to seek an election on this fundamental question if they enjoyed the protection of a state Right to Work Law. Each worker would be empowered to withdraw his support from the union without fear of being discharged."

Mr. Borage said the petition reflects "substantial worker support for the objective of Missourians for Right to Work."

"My job's good for another 20 years!"

You could be right. But maybe not. These days, some jobs are disappearing for good because machines do them better than men. That's progress. It creates problems. But it also creates opportunities for new and better jobs. Will you be qualified to get them?

Local Bowling

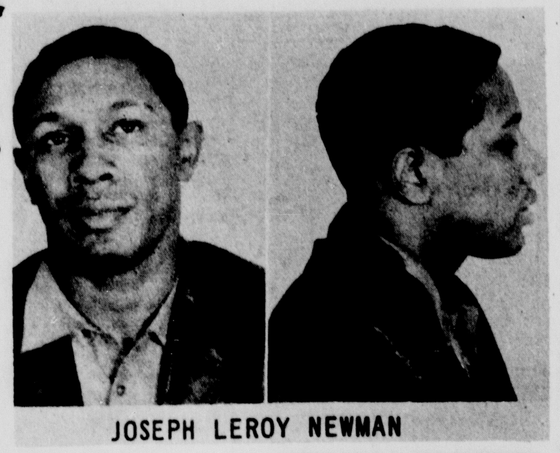
By Richard Lucy

The Sikeston District Bowling Association wrapped up its 1966-67 season Thursday night with its eighth annual banquet, and the presentations of league and special awards.

First on the program was the welcoming of the bowlers by the Association President Richard Lucy. After invocation by Mr. Bill Hailey the meal was served by the Imperial Restaurant. Then me the highlight of the night, the presentation of the Bowler of the year. This award is one given to the man whom the executive officers and board of Directors of the Association feels has done more for the betterment of bowling in the Association, not only for this season but for past seasons as well, this includes sportsmanship, willfulness to work, corporation, and the willfulness to help others. With deep sorry but with great pride, the association presented this years award to Mr. Bud Schrader which was accepted by his son Eddie. Not only did this man have a great inspiration for bowling but for anything that our youngsters would benefit from, such as the Little League and the Babe Ruth he will long remain in our hearts, and the Association offers its deepest sympathy to his wife Boots and son Eddie.

Other special awards that was presented at the banquet was the Association first Hall of Fame selections, one was given to the Puckett Distributing Company for 10 years of outstanding sponsorship of the Stags Bowling Team. And the other went to Richard Lucy for ten years of outstanding service, based on sportsmanship, and willfulness to work for the betterment of bowling.

In league awards Steward Steel captured the trophies in the Majestic League. In the Bootheel league the championship went to Rodgers Auto Sales. Sealtest Dairy captured the championship in the Crown League and took home the trophies. Championship honors went to Kindle Amusement in the Commercial League. Standard Oil took grand prize in the Imperial League dethroning D & S Electric who was trying for their 4th, consecutive championship. Assembly of God carried home the first place trophies in the Church League.



JOSEPH LEROY NEWMAN

Escapee Joins FBI List of 10

WASHINGTON - - Joseph Leroy Newman, who escaped confinement from a Federal reformatory in a spectacular mass jail break and three months later allegedly pumped four bullets into a Washington, D. C., detective attempting to arrest him, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

Newman and five fellow prisoners, all with records of violent crimes, escaped from the District of Columbia Reformatory located at Lorton, Virginia, on the afternoon of Feb. 10, in a stolen prison laundry truck driven by one of the escapees who was reportedly dressed in a guard's uniform.

FBI Agents apprehended three of the fugitives in Washington, D. C., the day following the escape but three of the men, including Newman, remain at large.

On May 13, 1967, an off-duty Washington, D.C. narcotic bureau detective, who reportedly recognized Newman as one of the badly sought jail escapees, was shot four times and critically wounded while attempting to arrest the wanted man at a Washington, D.C., apartment house. Two shots from a .38 caliber revolver hit the officer in the chest and two more penetrated his stomach, one bullet missing his heart by inches. The gunman then commandeered the car of a passing motorist at gunpoint, forced the driver to drive him several miles away, ejected the motorist and proceeded several miles more before abandoning the car.

Newman has been charged as the fast-shooting gunman and an intensive search is underway to locate him.

A federal grand jury at Richmond, Va., returned an indictment on April 5, 1967, charging Newman with escape from a Federal institution and interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle. In addition, a warrant was issued on May 15, 1967, at Washington, D.C., charging NewMan with assault with intent to kill.

Newman was first arrested in April, 1952, by the police department in Washington, D.C., on a housebreaking charge. Convicted for juvenile delinquency and store robbery, he was given a 4 1/2-year sentence and was confined until July, 1953, at the National Training School for Boys.

In March, 1954, he was jailed in Washington, D.C., on a robbery charge and upon conviction was sentenced to a term of two to six years and confined to the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Virginia. He was paroled in September, 1957, and following violation of this parole in 1958, he was recommitted to Lorton in 1959. In November, 1961, he was given a conditional release.

In May, 1962, Newman was again jailed in Washington, this time on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny and destruction of movable property. Upon conviction he was confined at the Lorton Reformatory with a one- to three-year sentence. In December, 1964, he was given a conditional release and was declared in violation of this release four months later.

In February, 1966, following conviction for housebreaking and larceny, Newman was again confined to the Lorton Reformatory with an additional two- to six-year sentence. The escape for which is currently being sought occurred on February 10, 1967.

Newman is a Negro American who was born in Washington, D. C., on November 25, 1935. He is 5' 5 1/2" tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, has a medium build, a medium complexion, black hair and brown eyes. He has pitted scars on his forehead, a scar on his left eyebrow and a pitted scar on his right eyebrow. He has worked as a shoe repairman.

This fugitive, who is charged with shooting and critically wounding a police officer while resisting arrest, should be considered armed and extremely dangerous. Anyone with information concerning Newman is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be found on the first page of local telephone directories.

His organization is dedicated to ousting the Jews from Palestine and giving the land to Arab refugees from the Israeli-Arab war of 1948.

After Shukairy's appearance, greeted by shouts of "Long live Shukairy!" and "Long live Arab unity!" King Hussein went on Amman radio.

"I have given instructions that no one should be allowed to seize the opportunity to maneuver in order to make individual political gains," Hussein said.

He did not mention any names, but apparently was referring to Shukairy, whom he had barred from Jordan until a reconciliation Tuesday at the same time Hussein signed a mutual defense pact with Nasser, a former foe. There was speculation that anti-Israel feeling among Jordanians made it politically expedient for him to line up with Nasser.

Wilson visited President Johnson Friday and agreed with him on the need for urgent peace efforts in the Middle East.

He called premature at this time newsmen's questions whether force might be used eventually to break Egypt's proclaimed blockade in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Efforts for a settlement will focus first, he said, on discussions at the United Nations and on a U.S.-British proposal for maritime nations to declare that the gulf is an open international waterway.

State Department lawyers maintain international law amply supports the position that the gulf should be open to ships of all nations.

It is international, they said, because four nations border on it -- Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Israel.

The U.N. Security Council has two resolutions before it, a U.S. proposal for a cooling-off period and a search for a solution through diplomatic means and an Egyptian measure blaming Israel for the trouble and calling for reactivation of the Egyptian-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission.

The Egyptian resolution was given no chance of approval. The belief was widespread that the Soviet Union, on behalf of the Arabs, would veto the U.S. resolution because the United States wants Egypt to hold its blockade in abeyance.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant defended Friday night his withdrawal of the U.N. Emergency Force from Egypt at Nasser's request. He said U.N. peacekeeping "relies on reason, local cooperation, skilful diplomacy, restraint and good faith. It does not, and cannot, rely on military force or threats, on power politics, or on physical or political domination."

Thant told a dinner of the U.N. Association of Canada in Montreal he realized the withdrawal caused "bitter disappointment and deep anxiety in many countries."

French President Charles de Gaulle made a personal effort Friday to cool off the Middle East situation and bring Israel and the Arabs to an international conference table.

In a statement read to newsmen after a meeting of the French Cabinet, De Gaulle warned that any nation starting armed action would have neither France's "approval nor support."

He also said France "considers that each of the states has the right to live."

riders to military money bills putting a floor of 400,000 on the number of National Guardmen and 260,000 on Army Reservists who must receive regular drill pay.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who objected strongly in advance of the move, served notice he will fight for retention of a "strong and ready" Reserve force.

President Johnson has refrained from calling up any reserves in the Vietnam conflict but some congressmen think such a move would be necessary by any sizable American military involvement in the Middle East, where Arab-Israeli tensions continue to simmer.

Stennis, who heads the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, called the United States already over-extended in military commitments. He said ready reserves "must be supported fully with equipment, facilities and personnel because they are a vital part of our war plans."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a retired Army major general and a member of the Armed Services Committee, termed it "asinine to consider reducing the strength and thereby the fighting capabilities of either the Reserves or the National Guard" when new crises are arriving daily.

He called for a searching inquiry into the Pentagon plan.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., another member of the Armed Services Committee, said he supports Stennis' position on the Reserve reorganization. Aides said Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., another committee member, had protested the move as similar to earlier realignments at which Congress had balked.

Aides said Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., has asked the Armed Services Committee to consider carefully whether deactivation of New York's 27th Armored Divison would serve a useful purpose. He cited the claim of Brig. Gen. Collin P. Williams, its commander, that the outfit is in a high state of training and has a good record in emergencies.

Another aspect of the plan seen by some as creating friction between partisans of either the Guard or Reserve is the placing of all combat and combat-support elements -- such as infantry, armored and artillery -- under the Guard. The Reserve will contain only service-type units, such as supply, medical and engineer.

But in Indianapolis, Ind., where they were attending a conference, the top generals of the Guard and Reserve moved to put the lid on speculation about such friction.

"There's no downgrading of either one," said Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the National Guard Bureau. "Support organizations are just as important as combat groups, because without support you can't use combat units."

Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Welch, chief of Army Reserves, agreed and said the reorganization will result in a proper balance. "Our problem has been that we had more combat units than we needed," he added.

The Reserve Officers Association's executive committee convened to study details of the plan before taking any formal position on it.

Each state to lose a Guard division under the Pentagon plan will retain at least one brigade at 90 per cent of full combat strength.

Divisions to be abolished are: New York, 27th Armored; California, 49th Infantry and 40th Armored; Georgia, 48th Armored; Texas, 36th Infantry and 49th Armored; Virginia-Maryland, 29th Infantry; Alabama-Mississippi, 31st Infantry; Wisconsin, 32nd Infantry; Illinois, 33rd Infantry; Ohio, 37th Infantry; Louisiana-Arkansas, 39th Infantry; Washington-Oregon, 41st Infantry; Oklahoma, 45th Infantry and Michigan, 46th Infantry.

The Reserve will lose the last of its four infantry brigades -- Pennsylvania's 157th, Massachusetts' 187th, Minnesota's 205th and Montana's 191st.

coal from Gam Pha to Japan.

"Eyewitnesses," said Tass, "confirm that two American planes came in from two sides to bomb the Turkestan. The bombs fell 100 yards from the ship and afterwards both bombers fired explosive bullets at the ship from large caliber machine guns."

The Soviet note on the Turkestan incident was the strongest in a series of notes involving more and more serious charges of U.S. disturbances of Soviet ships in the Vietnam area.

Soviet ships, largely from Black Sea ports, often carry supplies to Communist North Vietnam.

The United States has rejected previous Soviet notes accusing U.S. warplanes of interfering with Soviet ships.

Auto Sales Rally in May

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. auto makers, after four months of sales that dismally trailed the 1966 pace, had the best sales month in May in more than a year.

Last month's sales, preliminary reports showed Friday, were a healthy eight per cent — 47,600 cars — above sales in May 1966.

The 823,797 vehicles that rolled out of dealer showrooms in May outnumbered those sold in any month back to March 1966, when customers bought 853,978.

General Motors, with all five of its divisions showing sharp upswings, led the surge with 471,530 vehicles sold, up 18 per cent— 70,041 — from May 1966.

Chrysler sales hit 121,547, up six per cent from May 1966 and American Motors had sales of 22,602, a 5.4 per cent increase.

Only Ford Motor Co., second largest of the U.S. auto builders, had sales still lagging behind last year's May rate. Ford sales of 208,117 were down 18 per cent, or 28,928 cars, compared to May 1966.

Parents Protest Grading System

BROOKFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The Brookfield school board agreed Thursday night to hold a meeting between school officials and a group of parents who are dissatisfied with the grading system.

The meeting will be Tuesday night at the Brookfield High School auditorium, the board said.

Petitions have been circulating protesting an "ungraded" system of promotion in the first three grades of elementary school. Pupils are judged on the basis of capabilities at the various levels. If the child is found lacking, his advancement is delayed a year.

Critics claim this is the same as "flunking" and that the rate is too high at Brookfield. The board said 59 children of 381 in the first three grades have been asked to take an extra year.

Communications Center Proposed

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — State Rep. Robert E. Young, R-Carthage, said Friday he has recommended a $21,000 addition to a pending appropriations bill to finance a communications center in the state capitol.

Young, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said the center would make possible the preparation of radio and television recordings to keep the public abreast of legislative and other governmental activities.

The staff work would be supplied by the Missouri Broadcasters' Association. Young's proposal has the support of Democratic Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, he said.

The omnibus bill, to which Young proposed the item be added, wil be considered by the House committee next Tuesday.

Ichord Spearheads M-16 Rifle Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., is leading a special subcommittee to South Vietnam to ask combat troops about the M-16 rifle.

There have been reports that the M-16 failed to work properly when used in combat.

"It is very important to emphasize," Ichord said, "There has been nothing revealed in hearings so far that would warrant the conclusion that the rifle is defective."

There has been testimony about a shortage of the rifles for training.

Other members of the subcommittee are Rep. Speedy O. Long, D-La., and Rep. William Bray, R-Ind.

A Marine lieutenant, straight from the platoon leader course at Quantico, took over a battle experienced platoon on the main line of resistance in Korea. One the first night of his command he saw that his men were beginning to dig their foxholes, and the green lieutenant asked his platoon sergeant, "Sergeant, where is my foxhole?" Replied the sergeant, "You're standing in it, sir. You just have to move the dirt."

Now! Big Company Group Insurance For Smaller Businesses

Now, businesses with less than 25 employees are eligible for a new, low-cost group health and life insurance program that offers coverage you'd expect to find only in big company group insurance plans.

It's P.E.P. (Progressive Employers Program) — from Mutual of Omaha and its life insurance affiliate, United of Omaha. P.E.P. solves the salary continuance problem for the small employer and helps reduce labor turnover by providing important financial security for the employee and his family.

If you have a small business, you owe it to yourself and your employees to investigate P.E.P. — the modern answer to the small businessman's need for a flexible, low-cost employee insurance program.

A boy in business for himself doesn't worry about summer jobs

Or fall jobs, or winter jobs, for that matter. Because the boy with a newspaper route—a junior independent merchant—has a year 'round income. The few hours he puts in each week not only provide monetary returns but the even more significant dividends of learning how free enterprise operates.

The business of learning the value of money, of keeping books, collecting, buying at wholesale and selling at retail is important. But not even money can buy the other skills acquired from route experience—learning to deal pleasantly with people, for instance, or the value of punctuality.

Your newspaperboy is learning all the time. His route experience helps him acquire the intangible skills so necessary for success both socially and professionally. He makes money at it, too.

Only about one boy in ten gets the opportunity to have a newspaper route. If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by newspaperboy route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

Rural Electric People Keep Their Eyes On The Future

Keeping step with progress is a habit with rural electric people.

Through the vision and persistence of rural people themselves, with the continuing help of Rural Electrification Administration loans, rural America is now 98 per cent electrified—compared with 10 per cent a few years ago.

Today, rural electrics across the land are serving remote missile bases and radar tracking stations, building atomic power generating plants, and combining their resources and needs to construct the huge fossil-fueled generating plants necessary to meet the ever-increasing demands for electric energy in their service areas.

Yes, rural electric people today have their eyes on the future. As a matter of fact, they haven't lost sight of it for the past three decades.

Dayan Makes Stand

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)— Defense Minister Moshe Dayan declared today Israeli troops alone will fight any war with the Arabs. He said he is firmly opposed to the use of foreign troops— such as Americans or British— on Israel's side.

The soldier-diplomat, recalled to the top defense job in a coalition government just this week, told a conference of several hundred newsmen: "I personally would not expect nor want anyone else to fight for us. I wouldn't like American or British boys getting killed here in order to secure our safety.

"I do not want other people to fight and get killed for us."

As he spoke, the U.N. Security Council resumed debate on the Middle East crisis in New York. It postponed voting on rival peace proposals until next week.

In another development, a leader campaigning among Arabs in Jordan for a holy war against Israel has received an indirect warning from King Hussein not to try to use the Middle East crisis for personal political gain.

Meanwhile, an Egyptian envoy to Brazil claimed Friday that Egypt has no intention of destroying Israel, diplomatic sources reported. Cairo radio broadcast a speech by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser May 26 in which he said Israel would have to start any Arab-Israeli war but if it did, war "will be total and the objective will be to destroy Israel."

The expressions of restraint underlined the shaky nature of Arab unity but did nothing to relieve tension along the borders of Jewish Israel and the Arab nations surrounding her.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said in Washington that if Egypt's threat to block Israeli shipping from the Gulf of Aqaba is not solved peacefully, a clash could mushroom into much more than just a local conflict in "only a matter of hours."

The gulf blockade issue also held up agreement among the 15 nations of the U.N. Security Council on measures aimed at easing the Middle East crisis.

The envoy in Brazil was Hussein Zulfikar Sabri, one of several men sent by Nasser to campaign in possibly sympathetic nations for the Arab cause.

Diplomatic sources said Brazilian Foreign Minister Jose de Magalhaes Pinto asked specifically whether Nasser had said Egypt aimed to liquidate Israel. They said Sabri denied Nasser ever had made such a statement or that it represents Egyptian policy.

In the Jordanian sector of Jerusalem, Ahmen Shukairy, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, urged thousands of Arabs to wage holy war on Israel.

The purse was found later near Dunagan's Market, 116 Branum, but the money was missing, police reported.

E. W. Pollard, 835 Tanner, reported to police Friday that cosmetics valued at about $50 were taken from the Vera Beauty Salon on May 29. The theft was reportedly to have occurred after a cleaning woman left a door open.

In other activity, Richard A. Sargent, 915 Taylor, was charged early today with careless and imprudent driving. He was arrested at William and Branum.

Chester P. Dockins, 408 Lillian Dr., was charged at 9:35 a.m. today with assault and battery.

Regiment Riddled By Marine Assault

SAIGON (A) — A veteran Communist regiment of almost 3,000 men in a fortified ridgeline was under steady assault today by more than 2,000 Marines aided by air and artillery strikes.

The Red regiment was reported to have lost 372 dead in the preceding 24 hours while fighting to retain its stronghold in Quang Tin Province a bare 25 miles south of the main U.S. Marine Base at Da Nang.

Leathernecks sweeping through the fooothills 18 miles in from the China Sea have been battering at the Communit unit for a week, killing 571 Reds.

In the past 24 hours the Marines appear to have pinned down the regiment on a three-mile ridgeline rising some 600 feet above a valley of paddy-fields and streams.

Another force of about 2,000 Marines made an amphibious assault landing 21 miles northeast of Hue in a move to cut one of the infiltration routes of North Vietnamese troops.

The war in the air also rose in intensity, with raids penetrating north of Hanoi Friday. Two American jets were downed, making 569 planes lost over North Vietnam.

The Navy put the Leatherneck amphibious force ashore in isolated dunes about 25 miles below the demilitarized zone. More Marines were landed by helicopter about six miles inland.

The sudden landing was made Friday and announced today. Military reports listed no immediate contact with the enemy.

The landing is designed to sweep out Communist controlled areas just above the Viet Cong strongold known as the "Street Without Joy" because of its long and bloody history of guerrilla fighting.

The South Vietnamese claimed they chopped up the crack 808th Viet Cong mobile battalion in a battle Friday a few miles below the zone and above Quang Trie City, the province capital. The Red battalion of some 600 men lost 200 dead to air, artillery and infantry pounding in a running battle.

The latest Marine clash erupted in full force Friday about nooon. It continued through the night and into today, sometimes with Marines and Communists grappling at bayonet point.

The destroyer Bigelow cruised off the coast with its big guns ready to provide support for the infantrymen.

The last amphibious assault in the northernmost areas was May 18 when Marines were landed for the first time inside the demilitarized zone.

In air action U.S. pilots reported several dogfights with Communist MIG interceptors Friday during raids on rail facilities northeast of Hanoi. No U.S. or enemy planes were immediately listed as downed.

The U.S. Command said several battalions of Marines were hitting Communist positions at Tam Ky under cover of air strikes and artillery. Early reports had 117 North Vietnamese killed, but there was no immediate word on Marine casualties.

The action continues in Operation Union 2, which began May 26 with a general assault by 3,000 U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops on the 3rd North Vietnamese Regiment and the 21st Viet Cong Regiment. Both enemy units had been operating in the sector for some time.

South Vietnamese troops declared a victory Friday over the Viet Cong's 808th Mobile Battalion in an engagement south of the demilitarized zone.

A spokesman said 150 of the 500-man crack Viet Cong detachment were slain in an assault by South Vietnamese paratroopers, infantry and armor. The action was braced by air strikes and artillery.

Government casualties were not announced.

The engagement took place less than five miles east of the U.S. Marine base camp at Dong Ha 12 miles below the demilitarized zone. The spot is the southeastern corner of a sector bounded by four Marine posts and known as Leatherneck Square.

The U.S. Command disclosed that a record 38 U.S. planes went down over North Vietnam in May. In all, 2,286 planes and helicopters have been destroyed by hostile action and other causes in five years of U.S. action in the war.

Bertrand Soldier's Face Cut When Automobile Overturns

Kenneth Winders, 19, Bertrand soldier assigned to go to Vietnam, received face cuts on Interstate 55, north of New Madrid, at 5:50 a.m. today when his car overturned.

He was brought to the Missouri Delta Community hospital and transferred to the Blytheville air force base hospital.

The highway patrol said that he apparently went to sleep, lost control of his car, struck a rise in the median and overturned.

He was on his way home for a 30-day leave from Ft. Bragg, N.C., to visit his parents, Mr. and Mrs. M.G. Winders, route two.

A graduate of Sikeston high school in 1965, he entered the army forces in July of that year.

Three teen-agers were bruised Friday at 5:50 p.m. on highway W, eight miles north of Poplar Bluff, when a 1961 Cadillac, driven by Charles McDaniels III, 16, Poplar Bluff, ran off the road and struck an embankment.

He lost control when he came over a hill and was rounding a curve.

Passengers were Freddie Haag, 14, and Tom Breeden, 14, both of Poplar Bluff.

The passengers were treated at the Poplar Bluff hospital.

Charles Hughes, 15, Grant City, driving a 1966 Chevrolet Friday morning on highway 114, four miles west of Sikeston, lost control and ran into a ditch. He was not injured.

Edward Gibson, 38, Jonesboro, Ark., driving on a gravel road, three and one-half miles north of Gray Ridge, lost control, ran off the highway into a ditch and overturned.

He escaped uninjured.

James Gross, 44, Qulin, was cut on his face, when he lost control of his 1967 Pontiac, ran off the road and struck a bridge abutment at 12:50 a.m. today on highway 53, north of Qulin.

He was treated at a Poplar Bluff hospital.

Levy Draws Three Years In Prison

COLUMBIA, S.C. (AP)— Capt. Howard B. Levy, the Army doctor who refused to train Vietnam-bound Green Beret medics, was dismissed from the Army today and sentenced to three years in prison for disloyalty and disobedience.

Defense requests that Levy be allowed to remain free, pending appeal, were denied. Levy was taken into custody in the courtroom and left in handcuffs.

The 30-year-old dermatologist, a native of Brooklyn, N.Y., stood with hands clasped behind him, facing the 10-member court-martial board as the sentence was read.

Levy exhibited no emotion as he returned to his seat.

The sentence included dismissal from the Army, forfeiture of all pay and allowances and three years at hard labor.

Chiefdefense attorney Charles Morgan Jr., of the American Civil Liberties Union, requested that Levy be granted bail or parole while the verdict was appealed. But the law officer, Col. Earl V. Brown, said neither he nor the tribunal had authority under the law to grant the request.

Brown told the court-martial board that it could submit a motion for clemency, if desired, to the commanding officer at Fort Jackson, Maj. Gen. Gines Perez.

The tribunal took 2 hours and 20 minutes to agree on the penalty. Levy could have received up to eight years.

The tribunal convicted Levy Friday of disobeying an order to train Special Forces medics in his dermatology clinic and with making disloyal statements opposing U.S. policy in Vietnam.

Earlier, the government dropped two of the disloyalty charges against Levy. Army prosecutor Capt. Richard Shusterman asked that the charges be dropped.

Agency May Take Over Head Start, Saving Summer Program for Missouri Bootheel

The future of the summer Head Start program in the Bootheel, which has been the chief topic of controversy in the administration of anti-poverty funds in the six county area since the dismissal of Lloyd Phillips and Wm. Graves as assistant directors of the Delta Economic Opportunity Corporation, may be settled Monday night.

The Southeast Missouri Development Corporation headed by President Pat Lea will vote then on acceptance of sponsorship of the program. The meeting is planned for 7:30 p.m. at the corporation headquarters in Portageville.

The education committee of the SEMO Development Corporation will recommend sponsorship to the board, Lea said.

The five-member education committee met Wednesday night but took no action. Thursday night the Delta Area Economic Opportunity Corporation voted to appoint Mike Cooper, Hayti, as temporary director of Head Start. He has served as assistant director of the program formerly headed by Phillips as director. It voted unanimously to have President Robert Edwards call the regional OEO office and request that the SEMO Development Corporation administer Head Start.

Lea said he received a letter urging the SEMO corp. to sponsor Head Start from Edwards Friday then polled the education committee. The education committee agreed to recommend that the board sponsor the program, but the decision of the board will determine the outcome, Lea stressed.

After polling the education committee, Lea said he called the regional OEO office in Kansas City. Don Thomason's office assured Lea that a representative would attend the Monday meeting and that if the board voted to sponsor Head Start, the representative would be ready to sign necessary papers.

Thomason said earlier that funds would not be released unless another regional agency agreed to take over the program.

The program is involved in a controversy over the poverty war administration in the Bootheel. Thomason has refused to permit DAEOC to continue to conduct the program in the region.

Lea said the education committee had received more than 100 letters from area educators and parents of children to be served by the $519,000 earmarked for the Head Start program. The letters urged that the SEMO Development Corporation sponsor the program, Lea said. It would serve about 1,700 children.

The SEMO Development Corporation has as its overall aim to promote education, commercial recreation and industry in the Bootheel.

The SEMO Development Corporation's three-man paid staff is federally financed through the DAEOC office but the two corporations function separately, Lea said.

Soviets Protest Ship Bombing

MOSCOW (AP) — A Soviet charge that two U.S. jets bombed a Russian ship off North Vietnam killing one crewman and injuring six, heightened chances today of a showdown with Moscow over raids by American planes in areas of Soviet shipping.

Shortly after Moscow received a report Friday from the captain of the Soviet ship Turkestan, Foreign Minister Andrei A. Gromyko handed a sharp protest to the U.S. Embassy's minister-counsellor, John C. Guthrie.

"In the event of a recurrence of such actions on the part of U.S. armed forces," Gromyko's note reportedly said, "the Soviet Union will be compelled to take appropriate measures to ensure the safety of its ships.

"The Soviet government insists, firstly, on the strict punishment of those responsible for the attack on the Soviet ship and, secondly, awaits assurances that there will be no recurrence of actions like this in respect of Soviet ships."

The U.S. Embassy had no immediate comment and forwarded the note to Washington.

The United States neither confirmed nor denied that U.S. planes bombed the ship, which the Soviets said was anchored in the harbor of Cam Pha, 50 miles north of Haiphong.

U.S. spokesmen have noted that American planes have tried to avoid hitting Soviet or other foreign vessels in raids along the North Vietnamese coast. The United States has answered earlier Soviet charges of hitting ships by saying that falling North Vietnamese antiaircraft shells were to blame.

Pravda, the official Communist party newspaper, printed the protest note on its front page today.

It commented: "It would be a mistake if the provacateurs did not fully consider the seriousness of the warning in the Soviet government's note. The sponsors of this kind of provocation evidently have a poor understanding of the situation and do not fully consider that they may be given a fitting rebuff."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Vladivostok than an electro-mechanic named "Rybachuk" died three hours after the Friday raid. A motor-mechanic named "Zemtzev" was reported in critical condition after a three-hour operation. Tass also said that "there were five lightly wounded" and that "there are bullet holes in the upper structure and the ship's boats."

Tass said the Turkestan, a diesel cargo ship, was carrying

Guard-Reserve Plan Faces Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Congress disturbed by the extent of U.S. military commitments in Vietnam while the Middle East is in turmoil views with hostile suspicion the Pentagon's move to trim Army National Guard and Reserve forces.

The Defense Department announced Friday a realignment of the Guard and Reserve that would eliminate nearly 1,275 units scattered across the country.

This would lop off 15 Guard divisions, each with its own local pride and traditions, producing combat divisions and 18 brigades with the aim of having them ready to fight within eight weeks of callup.

The Guard and Reserve would drop from their present authorized total strength of 685,000 to 640,000.

Stanley Resor, secretary of the Army, disclosed at the same time a proposal that draftees who complete two years of service may not be assigned to reserve units for the additional four years of their military obligation. He said this would affect about 30,000 men in Guard and Reserve units to be abolished.

While Cyrus R. Vance, deputy defense secretary, characterized the move as sharpening "the fighting edge" of the Reserve forces, there were clear signs Congress may intervene before the scheduled changeover late this summer.

Vance noted that while the reorganization plan itself requires no congressional action, a bill to lower the manpower floor of the Army Reserve would have to be passed. The proposed strength of 240,000 for the Reserve is 20,000 below the floor provided in current law.

Congress, traditionally sensitive to the retention of armories and drill payrolls in local communities, in the past has added

Dayan Makes Stand

TEL AVIV, Israel (AP)— Defense Minister Moshe Dayan declared today Israeli troops alone will fight any war with the Arabs. He said he is firmly opposed to the use of foreign troops— such as Americans or British— on Israel's side.

The soldier-diplomat, recalled to the top defense job in a coalition government just this week, told a conference of several hundred newsmen: "I personally would not expect nor want anyone else to fight for us. I wouldn't like American or British boys getting killed here in order to secure our safety.

"I do not want other people to fight and get killed for us."

As he spoke, the U.N. Security Council resumed debate on the Middle East crisis in New York. It postponed voting on rival peace proposals until next week.

In another development, a leader campaigning among Arabs in Jordan for a holy war against Israel has received an indirect warning from King Hussein not to try to use the Middle East crisis for personal political gain.

Meanwhile, an Egyptian envoy to Brazil claimed Friday that Egypt has no intention of destroying Israel, diplomatic sources reported. Cairo radio broadcast a speech by Egyptian President Gamal Abdel Nasser May 26 in which he said Israel would have to start any Arab-Israeli war but if it did, war "will be total and the objective will be to destroy Israel."

The expressions of restraint underlined the shaky nature of Arab unity but did nothing to relieve tension along the borders of Jewish Israel and the Arab nations surrounding her.

British Prime Minister Harold Wilson said in Washington that if Egypt's threat to block Israeli shipping from the Gulf of Aqaba is not solved peacefully, a clash could mushroom into much more than just a local conflict in "only a matter of hours."

The gulf blockade issue also held up agreement among the 15 nations of the U.N. Security Council on measures aimed at easing the Middle East crisis.

The envoy in Brazil was Hussein Zulfikar Sabri, one of several men sent by Nasser to campaign in possibly sympathetic nations for the Arab cause.

Diplomatic sources said Brazilian Foreign Minister Jose de Magalhaes Pinto asked specifically whether Nasser had said Egypt aimed to liquidate Israel. They said Sabri denied Nasser ever had made such a statement or that it represents Egyptian policy.

In the Jordanian sector of Jerusalem, Ahmen Shukairy, leader of the Palestine Liberation Organization, urged thousands of Arabs to wage holy war on Israel.

The purse was found later near Dunagan's Market, 116 Branum, but the money was missing, police reported.

E. W. Pollard, 835 Tanner, reported to police Friday that cosmetics valued at about $50 were taken from the Vera Beauty Salon on May 29. The theft was reportedly to have occurred after a cleaning woman left a door open.

In other activity, Richard A. Sargent, 915 Taylor, was charged early today with careless and imprudent driving. He was arrested at William and Branum.

Chester P. Dockins, 408 Lillian Dr., was charged at 9:35 a.m. today with assault and battery.

Regiment Riddled By Marine Assault

SAIGON (A) — A veteran Communist regiment of almost 3,000 men in a fortified ridgeline was under steady assault today by more than 2,000 Marines aided by air and artillery strikes.

The Red regiment was reported to have lost 372 dead in the preceding 24 hours while fighting to retain its stronghold in Quang Tin Province a bare 25 miles south of the main U.S. Marine Base at Da Nang.

Leathernecks sweeping through the fooothills 18 miles in from the China Sea have been battering at the Communit unit for a week, killing 571 Reds.

In the past 24 hours the Marines appear to have pinned down the regiment on a three-mile ridgeline rising some 600 feet above a valley of paddyfields and streams.

Another force of about 2,000 Marines made an amphibious assault landing 21 miles northeast of Hue in a move to cut one of the infiltration routes of North Vietnamese troops.

The war in the air also rose in intensity, with raids penetrating north of Hanoi Friday. Two American jets were downed, making 569 planes lost over North Vietnam.

The Navy put the Leatherneck amphibious force ashore in isolated dunes about 25 miles below the demilitarized zone. More Marines were landed by helicopter about six miles inland.

The sudden landing was made Friday and announced today. Military reports listed no immediate contact with the enemy.

The landing is designed to sweep out Communist controlled areas just above the Viet Cong strongold known as the "Street Without Joy" because of its long and bloody history of guerrilla fighting.

The South Vietnamese claimed they chopped up the crack 808th Viet Cong mobile battalion in a battle Friday a few miles below the zone and above Quang Trie City, the province capital. The Red battalion of some 600 men lost 200 dead to air, artillery and infantry pounding in a running battle.

The latest Marine clash erupted in full force Friday about nooon. It continued through the night and into today, sometimes with Marines and Communists grappling at bayonet point.

The destroyer Bigelow cruised off the coast with its big guns ready to provide support for the infantrymen.

The last amphibious assault in the northernmost areas was May 18 when Marines were landed for the first time inside the demilitarized zone.

In air action U.S. pilots reported several dogfights with Communist MIG interceptors Friday during raids on rail facilities northeast of Hanoi. No U.S. or enemy planes were immediately listed as downed.

The U.S. Command said several battalions of Marines were hitting Communist positions at Tam Ky under cover of air strikes and artillery. Early reports had 117 North Vietnamese killed, but there was no immediate word on Marine casualties.

The action continues in Operation Union 2, which began May 26 with a general assault by 3,000 U.S. Marines and South Vietnamese troops on the 3rd North Vietnamese Regiment and the 21st Viet Cong Regiment. Both enemy units had been operating in the sector for some time.

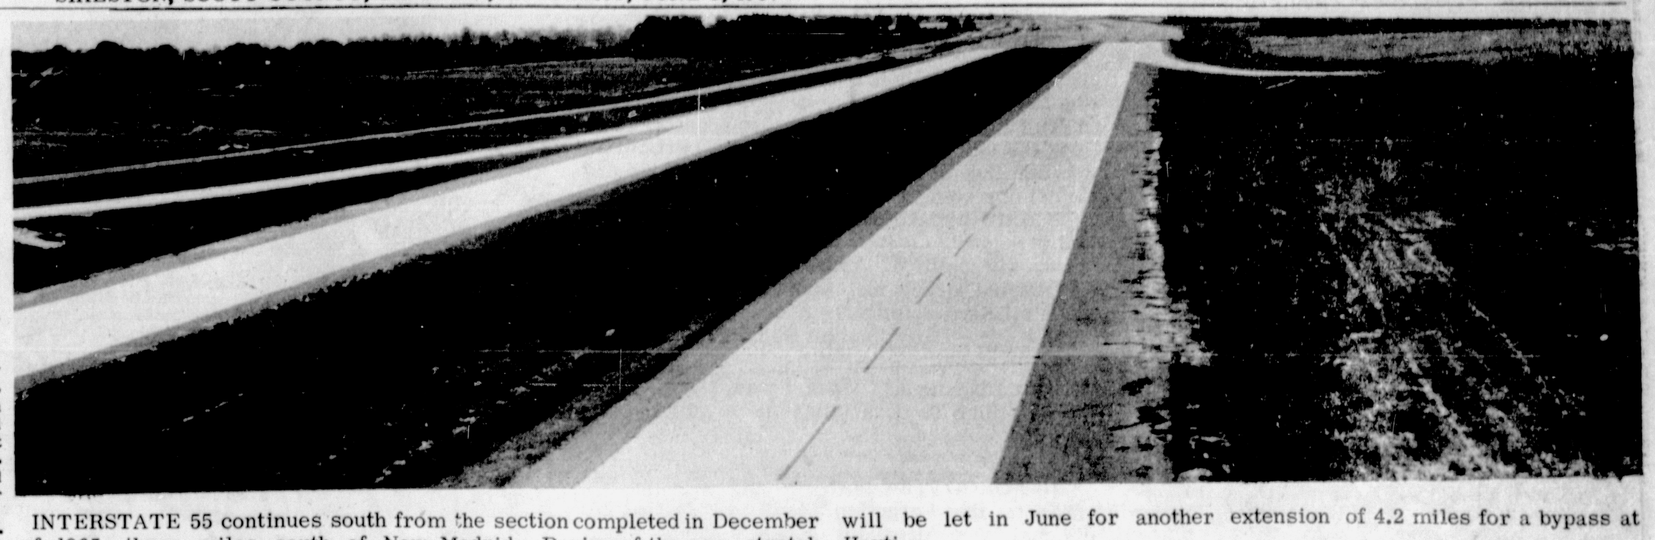
South Vietnamese troops declared a victory Friday over the Viet Cong's 808th Mobile Battalion in an engagement south of the demilitarized zone.

A spokesman said 150 of the 500-man crack Viet Cong detachment were slain in an assault by South Vietnamese paratroopers, infantry and armor. The action was braced by air strikes and artillery.

Government casualties were not announced.

The engagement took place less than five miles east of the U.S. Marine base camp at Dong Ha 12 miles below the demilitarized zone. The spot is the southeastern corner of a sector bounded by four Marine posts and known as Leatherneck Square.

The U.S. Command disclosed that a record 38 U.S. planes went down over North Vietnam in May. In all, 2,286 planes and helicopters have been destroyed by hostile action and other causes in five years of U.S. action in the war.



INTERSTATE 55 continues south from the section completed in December of 1965, three miles south of New Madrid. Paving of the new stretch of 13 miles extending south of Portageville will start in June. Contract will be let in June for another extension of 4.2 miles for a bypass at Hayti.

"The Soviet government insists, firstly, on the strict punishment of those responsible for the attack on the Soviet ship and, secondly, awaits assurances that there will be no recurrence of actions like this in respect of Soviet ships."

The U.S. Embassy had no immediate comment and forwarded the note to Washington.

The United States neither confirmed nor denied that U.S. planes bombed the ship, which the Soviets said was anchored in the harbor of Cam Pha, 50 miles north of Haiphong.

U.S. spokesmen have noted that American planes have tried to avoid hitting Soviet or other foreign vessels in raids along the North Vietnamese coast. The United States has answered earlier Soviet charges of hitting ships by saying that falling North Vietnamese antiaircraft shells were to blame.

Pravda, the official Communist party newspaper, printed the protest note on its front page today.

It commented: "It would be a mistake if the provocateurs did not fully consider the seriousness of the warning in the Soviet government's note. The sponsors of this kind of provocation evidently have a poor understanding of the situation and do not fully consider that they may be given a fitting rebuff."

The Soviet news agency Tass reported from Vladivostok than an electro-mechanic named "Rybachuk" died three hours after the Friday raid. A motor-mechanic named "Zemtzev" was reported in critical condition after a three-hour operation. Tass also said that "there were five lightly wounded" and that "there are bullet holes in the upper structure and the ship's boats."

Tass said the Turkestan, a diesel cargo ship, was carrying

Guard-Reserve Plan Faces Opposition

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Congress disturbed by the extent of U.S. military commitments in Vietnam while the Middle East is in turmoil views with hostile suspicion the Pentagon's move to trim Army National Guard and Reserve forces.

The Defense Department announced Friday a realignment of the Guard and Reserve that would eliminate nearly 1,275 units scattered across the country.

This would lop off 15 Guard divisions, each with its own local pride and traditions, producing combat divisions and 18 brigades with the aim of having them ready to fight within eight weeks of callup.

The Guard and Reserve would drop from their present authorized total strength of 685,000 to 640,000.

Stanley Resor, secretary of the Army, disclosed at the same time a proposal that draftees who complete two years of service may not be assigned to reserve units for the additional four years of their military obligation. He said this would affect about 30,000 men in Guard and Reserve units to be abolished.

While Cyrus R. Vance, deputy defense secretary, characterized the move as sharpening "the fighting edge" of the Reserve forces, there were clear signs Congress may intervene before the scheduled changeover late this summer.

Vance noted that while the reorganization plan itself requires no congressional action, a bill to lower the manpower floor of the Army Reserve would have to be passed. The proposed strength of 240,000 for the Reserve is 20,000 below the floor provided in current law.

Congress, traditionally sensitive to the retention of armories and drill payrolls in local communities, in the past has added

POR CHARLIE SAYS!

Enough disrespect has been shown for the Flag that a reaction has set in.

This was apparent in the patriotic parade spontaneously organized in New York City by a city employee.

The marchers, not all of them young and vigorous, protested the behavior of the legions of unwashed, long haired, slovenly draft card burners, creeps, and flag burners, which too frequently pollute the streets.

They established that the behavior of those who take their patriotism so casually is neither average, normal nor typical.

It is consoling to believe that the attendance at Memorial Day services in Sikeston was greater than it might have been expected because of this reaction.

In recent years neither Memorial Day nor Labor Day have been observed by Americans as being holidays with any deep meaning.

Too often those who have died in battle have either been forgotten by the masses in poorly attended ceremonies to honor them or the services have been abandoned because of lack of attendance.

Labor Day is not one in which many persons pay homage to the dignity of labor.

Both days have had a special meaning as holidays which has nothing to do with their origin.

Memorial Day is sort of a free wheeling first day of summer and Labor Day marks the beginning of fall recreational and outdoor activity. Relaxation and entertainment have been the central theme - two days devoted to selfish, self centered idleness and rest.

They are days for families to get together, of picnics, outings, automobile racing, ball games, and less happily of motor trips, which too often involve too much speed, booze and tragedy.

Whatever the reason, more than 200 turned out for a revival of the Memorial Day service at the Garden of Memories cemetery.

The cemetery officials, the Rev. Joseph Wagner, pastor of the First Methodist church; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter McGrane of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church, and the national guards deserve credit for taking part in it.

It would be comforting to think that those who did not attend gave at least a fleeting thought to those who sacrificed their lives so that the rest of us can live in freedom.

LONG'S POLITICAL FUTURE

The political future of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, can only be described as being very much in doubt as a result of disclosures this week concerning his close legal and financial connections with St. Louis attorney Morris Shenker. With Life magazine accusing Bowling Green's most famous citizen of attempting to influence the outcome of Jimmy Hoffa's legal battle to stay out of prison, the real political coup de grace has been the disclosure that Senator Long has been receiving large legal fees from Shenker, a St. Louis attorney who seems to specialize in representing some of the more unsavory elements in St. Louis, East St. Louis and elsewhere.

As this newspaper noted yesterday, the real question that Senator Long needs to answer is why he is receiving as much as $2,000 per month for legal services from the Shenker law firm.

This, too, is the question that voters will be asking in 1968, if the Senator decides he will seek re-election.

The reaction to the Long disclosures in Jefferson City has been one of surprise and almost disbelief that the junior Senator would permit himself to get so deeply involved in feathering his own financial nest. As one veteran capital observer noted, "I thought Ed Long was smarter than that."

The unfavorable publicity is bound to have an effect on Long's political future, and perhaps sooner than he thinks. If Senator Williams does not succeed in harassing Long, and perhaps even demanding an investigation into the Missourian's personal affairs, then there may well be ambitious Democrats who will challenge the Senator in next year's primary.

The Republicans, and specifically Rep. Tom Curtis, will also receive great encouragement from the disclosures.

Several Democratic opponents for Long are already being mentioned, including Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who seriously considered challenging Long in 1962, and former Governor John M. Dalton of Kennett and Jefferson City. Undoubtedly both men are now thinking seriously of stepping up to oppose Long.

Jackson County Judge Charles Curry of Kansas City is another possible nominee, and some have even complimented State Senator Earl Blackwell of Jefferson County by mentioning him as a possible opponent. The latter is a questionable opponent at best.

Some of the state's more practical political observers have cynically said the public will forget about the Long case by the time the 1968 election rolls around. This might have been the case 20 years ago, but today, voters are more politically minded and less prone to overlook the blemishes of public figures, particularly when they are drawing large figures for doing something besides their official duties.

We don't believe the voters will overlook the Long record, as it is now being written. Indeed, the political future of Edward V. Long of Bowling Green may soon be as stale as this week's Life magazine.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

Who is the Forgotten Man? He is that individual who does an honest's day's work, pays his bills, brings up two or more children, keeps up a small savings account, never asks for charity from anyone, never gets into trouble with the police, never finds fault unless a principle is involved - in short, he is the individual who keeps going on his own momentum, good times, bad times, or indifferent times.

When the hat is passed around, the Forgotten Man chips in his mite. The taxpayer visits him regularly, and collects toll for the upkeep of the police courts, jails, workhouses, and the relief rolls - none of which the Forgotten Man ever uses. He is self-supporting, self-sufficient, and being so, he is counted in on nothing except the census.

The Forgotten Man is just the everyday, common, ordinary, plain citizen who does the best he can and makes a pretty good job of it. He is the man you can count on in times of war or in times of peace, in times of hysterical prosperity or in times of gloomy depression; in times of Republican management or in times of Democratic management. He is the dependable old horse broken to harness, and he will stand without hitching.

Remember, there are millions of him, and there isn't much chance that he will ever go crazy even though the whole world about him does seem inclined that way. When things get too bad he will take a hand at running them himself, and you can depend upon him to do it in a sensible way. - Biloxi-Gulfport (Miss.) Daily Herald

There's a certain unpopular uneasiness about computers. But it isn't because people are afraid they will someday be automated out of their jobs. It's just a feeling that machines are becoming too humanlike.

This was revealed in a study based on interviews with 3,000 persons, reported in Datamation magazine. It was found that many people believe - wrongly - that the computer is infallible and that it is a "kind of superbrain which thinks as humans do and which can provide instant solutions to highly complicated problems that the ordinary man cannot even begin to understand."

As more and more people come into daily contact with computers, however, this modern-day myth is expected to lose its force. Familiarity in this case will breed not contempt but better understanding of thinking machines' true capacity to think -- which is no more than men give them.

A STUDY IN LOGISTICS

In transportation, there is nothing that can compare for sheer efficiency with a string of railroad cars on a track. They can move more people and more goods, with greater economy, than any other mode of transport. This is one of the reasons why those who have waited with pen in hand to write the epitaph of the railroads will have a long wait.

The efficiency of rail transport is graphically illustrated in a book written by Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island. He has no doubts about the importance of railroads in any balanced transportation system. In his book, "Megalopolis Unbound", he says, "One land of urban expressway can accomodate up to about 2,200 passenger cars per hour, which at the national average of 1.3 commuters per day would carry 2,860 people. By contrast, a single set of transit tracks can accommodate about 30 trains an hour with two - minute headways between trains. If each train has 10 cars and each car carries a capacity load, including standees, of 200 people, the single set of tracks can deliver 60,000 people per hour. The rail line thus theoretically can deliver 21 times as many people per hour as the lane of the expressway."

Besides moving a larger volume of "payload" in what amounts to a single package, rail transport is more efficient and more economical because it takes some 7.5 times more force to move a loaded highway vehicle than a steel wheeled railroad car with a comparable load. It is little wonder that when transport needs soar, as in the case of a military emergency, the railroads quickly become an irreplaceable logistical lifeline.

H.L. Hunt Says

DISTRICT PLAN IS SUPERIOR

The District Plan of choosing presidential electors is far better than any other proposal put forward to change the present antiquated system of naming those electors.

Many disadvantages are apparent in the direct vote plan advocated by some. Prominent among these disadvantages is the fact that this plan would deliver a new and severe blow to the doctrine of states rights.

The direct vote for President and Vice President would necessarily result in the Federal Government conducting elections within the boundaries of the individual states. The direct vote plan would immediately nullify the systems for absentee voting which vary across the nation from state to state and are formulated for the convenience of the citizens of each state.

Under the direct election plan, the Federal Government would have to impose age limits to apply in all the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The Federal Government also would set residence requirements for voting.

We now have states which allow citizens to vote at the age of 18 and one state which allows citizens to vote at the age of 19. Four states allow citizens to vote at the age of 20. These age limits different from the more customary limit of 21 are prescribed by the residents and voters of the states in accordance with their best opinion as to the proper age at which the state's citizens may be afforded the privilege of suffrage.

These are potent arguments against the direct vote, and there are others of equal force. The District Plan offers none of these disadvantages. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

NASSER'S ALLIES

On May 27, Drew Pearson reported that Nasser has so "electrified the Arab world and is riding so high that it's impossible for his bitter enemies, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and King Hussein of Jordan, to refuse him support."

On May 30, King Hussein flew to Cairo to sign a defense pact with Nasser. On the same day, the leaders of Algeria and Morocco also announced support for Nasser.

WASHINGTON -- Reporters were told nothing about the critical 90-minute conference last week between president Johnson and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban. From White House insiders, however, this column has now learned what was said.

The president would have preferred to avoid the confrontation, kept Eban waiting most of the day for an appointment.

While storm clouds darkened over the Near East, LBJ busied himself with such urgent matters as accepting a season pass to the Washington whips soccer games. He also greeted the New Iranian Ambassador, said goodbye to the departing Italian ambassador and consulated with his ambassadors on the problems of Peru, Venezuela and El Salvador.

When Eban was finally admitted into the president's oval office late in the evening, he quickly got to the question the president didn't want to answer: What was the United States going to do about the Egyptian blockade of the Tiran Strait?

Eban recalled that Israel had given up strategic Sharm El Sheik, which commands the narrow strait, at the specific request of the Eisenhower administration in 1957. The United States asked Israel to move her troops out and permit U.N. troops to move in.

The United States, declared the aide-memore, "Believes that the Gulf of Aqaba comprehends international waters and that no nation has the right to prevent free and innocent passage in the Gulf and through the Straits giving access thereto."

Eban asked President Johnson whether the United States intended to honor this. Discreetly he left unsaid the fact that the United States has sent 450,000 troops to Vietnam to honor a commitment less specific, in an area less strategic.

The President expressed sympathy for the Israeli position and reiterated that the United States regards the blockaded Strait as an international waterway. However, he warned that Israel would hurt herself in world eyes if she took military action to break the blockade.

This could alienate many countries, he said, which otherwise would support the principle of free access. It would be better, he suggested, if Israel would let the big maritime powers bring pressure upon Egypt to keep the international waterway open.

The President asked Eban to give world diplomacy a chance to settle the crisis, meanwhile promised to press for a satisfactor solution.

Note -- What irks Israeli leaders is that, while they have held back, Egypt has taken the ground overlooking the Straits of Tiran previously held by Israel and later by the United Nations. The Egyptians have hastifily fortified this strategic position, making it extremely costly for Israel to take it back by military force.

FURORE IN FLORIDA

An illustration of how to sour American sympathy for Israel is now taking place in Miami Beach, where Israeli politics has got mixed up with Florida politics.

In the current race for mayor of Miami Beach, Mayor Elliott Roosevelt, second son of President Roosevelt, is being challenged in a run-off by Jay Dermer, whose wife is an Israeli. Both have been campaigning passionately against Elliott, partly on the charge that when his father was president in 1937 he would not allow the "Exodus," with a load of refugees, to land in Florida en route to Cuba.

Whatever may have been the facts in this 30-year-old case, Elliott Roosevelt was then a youngster in college and had nothing to do with his father's policies. Furthermore, in later years, Elliott has taken over the work of his late mother in promoting bonds for Israel and has attended dinner after dinner in an effort to sell bonds and support Israel.

Despite this, some synagogues in the Miami Beach area are campaigning with the slogan "Vote for a Jew, don't vote for a Goy," while Mrs. Dermer and her husband are campaigning on the promise that if Dermer is elected mayor of Miami Beach he can help to stop the threat of war against Israel.

Note -- Most American Jews pride themselves on voting for a candidate for his abilities, not for his religion. In the last New York Mayor-Alty race, New York Jews had a chance to vote for Abe Beame, a fellow Jew and a Democrat, who opposed John Lindsay, a protestant Republican. Forty per cent of the New York Jews voted for Lindsay.

LIBERTY LOBBIES

The Liberty Lobby, whose founder regards Nazy Germany as the model for his brand of "Liberty," has joined the right-wing drive to recall Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Recall petitions have been printed in California by cosmetics distributor William Penn Patrick, a militant right-winger who ran against Ronald Reagan in the Republic primary because he considered Reagan too liberal.

Now Willis Carto, the chief patriarch and panjandrum of the Liberty Lobby, has thrown his organization into the fray. He is best known for his letters deploring the defeat of Adolf Hitler as a "tragedy for civilization" and advocating the shipment of American Negroes to Africa.

The Liberty Lobby has called a series of nine meetings throughout Idaho to set up a "telephone network" to organize a "grass roots" response to liberal legislation. The network also will be used to stir up opposition to church.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

THE TILTED SCALES

THE "LIBERAL" majority on the U.S. Supreme Court has a noble self-image. It is impossible to read its indignant opinions without concluding that here are gentlemen who see themselves as forthright defenders of little people against the clever and the powerful.

To this end, and particularly through its broad interpretations of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, the court has, in the past seven years, radically changed the rules of criminal evidence in America.

The key cases in this change were the Mallory decision of June 24, 1957, the Escobedo decision of June 22, 1964, and the Miranda case of June 13, 1966. The stars must be in great position for American criminals around mid-June.

MALLORY, a confessed Washington rapist who was sentenced to death in federal court, was turned loose by the supreme justices on the grounds that too long a time (2 p.m. until the next morning) elapsed between his arrest and his arraignment.

At 8 p.m., after his dinner, Mallory signed the typed confession and went to bed.

The Supreme Court held that the delay violated the defendant's constitutional rights. A short time after his release Mallory was arrested for a similar crime in Philadelphia.

DANNY ESCOBEDO, a 22-year-old Chicago Mexican, was convicted of murdering his brother-in-law after he had made damaging statements to the assistant state's attorney, which were later admitted in evidence.

The court ruled that Escobedo must go free because he was not permitted to have his attorney present while being questioned, nor was he told he need say nothing.

For the majority, Justice Goldberg said: "A system of criminal law enforcement which comes to depend on the 'confession' will, in the long run, be less reliable and more subject to abuses than a system which depends on extrinsic evidence independently secured through skillful investigation."

But in the dissent Justice Harlan said the rule "unjustifiably fetters legitimate police investigation." Justice Stewart remarked that there is nothing in the Constitution which "requires police to give advice." And Justice White added:

"By abandoning the voluntary-involuntary test for admissability of confessions, the court seems driven by the notion that it is uncivilized law enforcement to use an accused's own admissions against him at his trial.... The right to counsel now not only entitles the accused to counsel's advice and aid in preparing for trial, but stands as an impenetrable barrier to any interrogation once the accused has become a suspect. . .The rule is impossible to administer unless police cars are equipped with public defenders."

ON MARCH 3, 1963, a citizen of Phoenix named Miranda kidnaped and raped an 18-year-old girl. She picked him out of a police line-up, and he later wrote out a statement admitting and describing the crime. He was promptly convicted, but the Supreme Court set him free, again on grounds largely based on the Escobedo case.

The Fifth Amendment says that no man "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

The Supreme Court majority has decided that any police interrogation is equivalent to a "criminal case." This, Justice Harlan, Stewart and White describe as "poor constitutional law that will ultimately discourage any confession at all."

And Justice Harlan added: "We know that some crimes cannot be solved without confessions and that the court is taking a real risk with society's welfare in imposing its new regime on the country."

IN THE meantime, the incidence of crimes of violence is rising about four times as fast as population. City parks are empty after sundown. The streets of Washington are unsafe at night. Criminal courts of our great cities are so clogged, and conviction under the Supreme Court restrictions is often so uncertain, that reduction of the charge below that of the crime actually committed is becoming the rule rather than the exception.

Therefore, Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) and 15 other senators have introduced a joint resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to forbid the Supreme Court or any lesser court from throwing out a conviction based on a voluntary confession.

No one defends the rack or the rubber hose, but the question is: "Has the Warren court, by its stringent restrictions on police inquiry, made punishment so difficult that the safety of honest citizens is in growing peril?

If the court is to be curbed, it can only be curbed by constitutional amendment. That is, if the court doesn't decide that the amendment is unconstitutional.

TEACHERS CUT CLASS LINES

Seek Money For Drive To Unionize Two Million Instructors

New York: -- At the Madison Square Garden "mass-in" one recent night, at least 7,000 teachers, mostly young, "bulged - in" with true proletarian enthusiasm. They sat shoulder to shoulder with sewer workers, subway token sellers, motormen and zoo attendants. And with 12,000 other workers they roared in unison against the state government.

The other car, one of their leaders said this was the true sign of the times on the education-organization front -- no class lines, just picket lines -- and solidarity with the rest of labor in every large city until the American Federation of Teachers grows into the land's biggest union. And he meant it. He put the national goal at well over 1.5 million in the "new," revitalized American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO).

In response to a sharp and quizzical look on this correspondent's face, the teachers' leader, Al Shanker, vice president of the national federation and leader of the huge 47,000 - member New York United Federation of Teachers -- largest local of its kind in the free world -- outlined his battle plan.

"First you must understand," said the lanky, youngish militant, "our own new fearlessness and militancy. First, we were arrested over in Woodbridge, N.J., and just a few weeks ago in Baltimore 120 of our people were hauled in by sheriffs and their deputies. We defied court injunctions. And we'll continue wherever they rule we can't strike or picket."

The federation's objectives are the big cities, he added, ticking them off -- Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland (Ore.), Buffalo, Milwaukee and the Twin Cities. In the suburbs of New York alone, he reckoned, 100,000 teachers were "ready for unionization." Out on Long Island, said he, there soon would be union elections among 25,000 teachers.

The recruiters are there in fields the public just doesn't yet see, continued Shanker.

"There are the indigenous poor," he said.

These according to the teachers' leader will total "hundreds of thousands in the next two years and perhaps a million in the next decade." Under the federal government's new project, the "poverty women" will be hired as assistant teachers. They will assist right in the classrooms. They'll aid the younger children by talking in their native languages.

The women from the slum and ghetto areas will help children -- whose problems they know best -- with their clothes and free lunches and to prepare for the return home. The ladies will read aloud to them, translate into English if necessary, keep the tougher ones, the maladjusted, the retarded, from battling each other. And the women will mark papers as well.

Both in New York and at the American Federation of Teachers' national headquarters in Chicago, these "assistant teachers" will come under the AFT jurisdiction. They'll be approached both on the school level and through the "community union" operation near their homes. No doubt the jurisdiction is vast.

But so are other teaching echelons. The federation will go after the parochial school systems as well as private schools and community colleges.

"This is a vast field and untouched," said Shanker. "Most of the latter employ the equivalent of high school teachers. In this city alone, they number over 100,000. This is the future."

New organization techniques of this future will be unveiled at the AFT's 51st Annual Convention in Washington's Hotel Hilton beginning Aug. 21. Militancy will be the motif: The spotlight will be on those who struck St. John's University; those who were arrested and jailed in New Jersey; those who were cooped up en masse in Baltimore.

Speakers will report on "how it was done" in Washington where the big Local 6 -- one of 675 such units across the land -- won the first election ever held in the city's educational system. Others will report on the "amazing" growth of the AFT from 48,000 in 1960 to 140,000 today. Undoubtedly the 1,000 delegates will roar support of the gargantuan New York local which plans to strike the New York City school system early in September.

No doubt, the teachers are on the march. They plan special concentrations in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois where a ban on such strikes of school systems is now being pushed.

But it all depends on the root of everything -- money. Until now the national office, presided over by the bantam Charles Cogen, has had only nine organizers in the field. The AFT hopes to move to Washington and take on triple that number. But the money just isn't pouring out of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Dept. as it did ($1.1 million) in the past few years.

The big unions, which pledged to back their moral support with hard currency, just are not giving to the IUD's "Special Organizing Fund."

So the teachers now are trying to get their more proletarian brothers and sisters, as they say inside labor, to unclog the financial pipelines as well as wipe out the class lines. But money or no money, they're on the move.

POR CHARLIE SAYS!

Enough disrespect has been shown for the Flag that a reaction has set in.

This was apparent in the patriotic parade spontaneously organized in New York City by a city employee.

The marchers, not all of them young and vigorous, protested the behavior of the legions of unwashed, long haired, slovenly draft card burners, creeps, and flag burners, which too frequently pollute the streets.

They established that the behavior of those who take their patriotism so casually is neither average, normal nor typical.

It is consoling to believe that the attendance at Memorial Day services in Sikeston was greater than it might have been expected because of this reaction.

In recent years neither Memorial Day nor Labor Day have been observed by Americans as being holidays with any deep meaning.

Too often those who have died in battle have either been forgotten by the masses in poorly attended ceremonies to honor them or the services have been abandoned because of lack of attendance.

Labor Day is not one in which many persons pay homage to the dignity of labor.

Both days have had a special meaning as holidays which has nothing to do with their origin.

Memorial Day is sort of a free wheeling first day of summer and Labor Day marks the beginning of fall recreational and outdoor activity. Relaxation and entertainment have been the central theme - two days devoted to selfish, self centered idleness and rest.

They are days for families to get together, of picnics, outings, automobile racing, ball games, and less happily of motor trips, which too often involve too much speed, booze and tragedy.

Whatever the reason, more than 200 turned out for a revival of the Memorial Day service at the Garden of Memories cemetery.

The cemetery officials, the Rev. Joseph Wagner, pastor of the First Methodist church; the Rt. Rev. Msgr. Walter McGrane of St. Francis Xavier Catholic church, and the national guards deserve credit for taking part in it.

It would be comforting to think that those who did not attend gave at least a fleeting thought to those who sacrificed their lives so that the rest of us can live in freedom.

LONG'S POLITICAL FUTURE

The political future of Missouri's junior United States Senator, Edward V. Long, can only be described as being very much in doubt as a result of disclosures this week concerning his close legal and financial connections with St. Louis attorney Morris Shenker. With Life magazine accusing Bowling Green's most famous citizen of attempting to influence the outcome of Jimmy Hoffa's legal battle to stay out of prison, the real political coup de grace has been the disclosure that Senator Long has been receiving large legal fees from Shenker, a St. Louis attorney who seems to specialize in representing some of the more unsavory elements in St. Louis, East St. Louis and elsewhere.

As this newspaper noted yesterday, the real question that Senator Long needs to answer is why he is receiving as much as $2,000 per month for legal services from the Shenker law firm.

This, too, is the question that voters will be asking in 1968, if the Senator decides he will seek re-election.

The reaction to the Long disclosures in Jefferson City has been one of surprise and almost disbelief that the junior Senator would permit himself to get so deeply involved in feathering his own financial nest. As one veteran capital observer noted, "I thought Ed Long was smarter than that."

The unfavorable publicity is bound to have an effect on Long's political future, and perhaps sooner than he thinks. If Senator Williams does not succeed in harassing Long, and perhaps even demanding an investigation into the Missourian's personal affairs, then there may well be ambitious Democrats who will challenge the Senator in next year's primary.

The Republicans, and specifically Rep. Tom Curtis, will also receive great encouragement from the disclosures.

Several Democratic opponents for Long are already being mentioned, including Lt. Gov. Thomas F. Eagleton, who seriously considered challenging Long in 1962, and former Governor John M. Dalton of Kennett and Jefferson City. Undoubtedly both men are now thinking seriously of stepping up to oppose Long.

Jackson County Judge Charles Curry of Kansas City is another possible nominee, and some have even complimented State Senator Earl Blackwell of Jefferson County by mentioning him as a possible opponent. The latter is a questionable opponent at best.

Some of the state's more practical political observers have cynically said the public will forget about the Long case by the time the 1968 election rolls around. This might have been the case 20 years ago, but today, voters are more politically minded and less prone to overlook the blemishes of public figures, particularly when they are drawing large figures for doing something besides their official duties.

We don't believe the voters will overlook the Long record, as it is now being written. Indeed, the political future of Edward V. Long of Bowling Green may soon be as stale as this week's Life magazine.

THE FORGOTTEN MAN

Who is the Forgotten Man? He is that individual who does an honest's day's work, pays his bills, brings up two or more children, keeps up a small savings account, never asks for charity from anyone, never gets into trouble with the police, never finds fault unless a principle is involved - in short, he is the individual who keeps going on his own momentum, good times, bad times, or indifferent times.

When the hat is passed around, the Forgotten Man chips in his mite. The taxpayer visits him regularly, and collects toll for the upkeep of the police courts, jails, workhouses, and the relief rolls - none of which the Forgotten Man ever uses. He is self-supporting, self-sufficient, and being so, he is counted in on nothing except the census.

The Forgotten Man is just the everyday, common, ordinary, plain citizen who does the best he can and makes a pretty good job of it. He is the man you can count on in times of war or in times of peace, in times of hysterical prosperity or in times of gloomy depression; in times of Republican management or in times of Democratic management. He is the dependable old horse broken to harness, and he will stand without hitching.

Remember, there are millions of him, and there isn't much chance that he will ever go crazy even though the whole world about him does seem inclined that way. When things get too bad he will take a hand at running them himself, and you can depend upon him to do it in a sensible way. - Biloxi-Gulfport (Miss.) Daily Herald

There's a certain unpopular uneasiness about computers. But it isn't because people are afraid they will someday be automated out of their jobs. It's just a feeling that machines are becoming too humanlike.

This was revealed in a study based on interviews with 3,000 persons, reported in Datamation magazine. It was found that many people believe - wrongly - that the computer is infallible and that it is a "kind of superbrain which thinks as humans do and which can provide instant solutions to highly complicated problems that the ordinary man cannot even begin to understand."

As more and more people come into daily contact with computers, however, this modern-day myth is expected to lose its force. Familiarity in this case will breed not contempt but better understanding of thinking machines' true capacity to think -- which is no more than men give them.

A STUDY IN LOGISTICS

In transportation, there is nothing that can compare for sheer efficiency with a string of railroad cars on a track. They can move more people and more goods, with greater economy, than any other mode of transport. This is one of the reasons why those who have waited with pen in hand to write the epitaph of the railroads will have a long wait.

The efficiency of rail transport is graphically illustrated in a book written by Senator Claiborne Pell of Rhode Island. He has no doubts about the importance of railroads in any balanced transportation system. In his book, "Megalopolis Unbound", he says, "One land of urban expressway can accomodate up to about 2,200 passenger cars per hour, which at the national average of 1.3 commuters per day would carry 2,860 people. By contrast, a single set of transit tracks can accommodate about 30 trains an hour with two - minute headways between trains. If each train has 10 cars and each car carries a capacity load, including standees, of 200 people, the single set of tracks can deliver 60,000 people per hour. The rail line thus theoretically can deliver 21 times as many people per hour as the lane of the expressway."

Besides moving a larger volume of "payload" in what amounts to a single package, rail transport is more efficient and more economical because it takes some 7.5 times more force to move a loaded highway vehicle than a steel wheeled railroad car with a comparable load. It is little wonder that when transport needs soar, as in the case of a military emergency, the railroads quickly become an irreplaceable logistical lifeline.

"Oh, no, no, monsieur, I could never do a thing like that."

"Tell me," the young man said, laughing, "don't you ever do anything the slightest bit improper?"

H.L. Hunt Says

DISTRICT PLAN IS SUPERIOR

The District Plan of choosing presidential electors is far better than any other proposal put forward to change the present antiquated system of naming those electors.

Many disadvantages are apparent in the direct vote plan advocated by some. Prominent among these disadvantages is the fact that this plan would deliver a new and severe blow to the doctrine of states rights.

The direct vote for President and Vice President would necessarily result in the Federal Government conducting elections within the boundaries of the individual states. The direct vote plan would immediately nullify the systems for absentee voting which vary across the nation from state to state and are formulated for the convenience of the citizens of each state.

Under the direct election plan, the Federal Government would have to impose age limits to apply in all the 50 states and the District of Columbia. The Federal Government also would set residence requirements for voting.

We now have states which allow citizens to vote at the age of 18 and one state which allows citizens to vote at the age of 19. Four states allow citizens to vote at the age of 20. These age limits different from the more customary limit of 21 are prescribed by the residents and voters of the states in accordance with their best opinion as to the proper age at which the state's citizens may be afforded the privilege of suffrage.

These are potent arguments against the direct vote, and there are others of equal force. The District Plan offers none of these disadvantages. HLH

Washington Merry-Go-Round

By Drew Pearson

NASSER'S ALLIES

On May 27, Drew Pearson reported that Nasser has so "electrified the Arab world and is riding so high that it's impossible for his bitter enemies, King Faisal of Saudi Arabia and King Hussein of Jordan, to refuse him support."

On May 30, King Hussein flew to Cairo to sign a defense pact with Nasser. On the same day, the leaders of Algeria and Morocco also announced support for Nasser.

WASHINGTON -- Reporters were told nothing about the critical 90-minute conference last week between president Johnson and Israeli Foreign Minister Abba Eban. From White House insiders, however, this column has now learned what was said.

The president would have preferred to avoid the confrontation, kept Eban waiting most of the day for an appointment.

While storm clouds darkened over the Near East, LBJ busied himself with such urgent matters as accepting a season pass to the Washington whips soccer games. He also greeted the New Iranian Ambassador, said goodbye to the departing Italian ambassador and consulated with his ambassadors on the problems of Peru, Venezuela and El Salvador.

When Eban was finally admitted into the president's oval office late in the evening, he quickly got to the question the president didn't want to answer: What was the United States going to do about the Egyptian blockade of the Tiran Strait?

Eban recalled that Israel had given up strategic Sharm El Sheik, which commands the narrow strait, at the specific request of the Eisenhower administration in 1957. The United States asked Israel to move her troops out and permit U.N. troops to move in.

The United States, declared the aide-memore, "Believes that the Gulf of Aqaba comprehends international waters and that no nation has the right to prevent free and innocent passage in the Gulf and through the Straits giving access thereto."

Eban asked President Johnson whether the United States intended to honor this. Discreetly he left unsaid the fact that the United States has sent 450,000 troops to Vietnam to honor a commitment less specific, in an area less strategic.

The President expressed sympathy for the Israeli position and reiterated that the United States regards the blockaded Strait as an international waterway. However, he warned that Israel would hurt herself in world eyes if she took military action to break the blockade.

This could alienate many countries, he said, which otherwise would support the principle of free access. It would be better, he suggested, if Israel would let the big maritime powers bring pressure upon Egypt to keep the international waterway open.

The President asked Eban to give world diplomacy a chance to settle the crisis, meanwhile promised to press for a satisfactor solution.

Note -- What irks Israeli leaders is that, while they have held back, Egypt has taken the ground overlooking the Straits of Tiran previously held by Israel and later by the United Nations. The Egyptians have hastifily fortified this strategic position, making it extremely costly for Israel to take it back by military force.

FURORE IN FLORIDA

An illustration of how to sour American sympathy for Israel is now taking place in Miami Beach, where Israeli politics has got mixed up with Florida politics.

In the current race for mayor of Miami Beach, Mayor Elliott Roosevelt, second son of President Roosevelt, is being challenged in a run-off by Jay Dermer, whose wife is an Israeli. Both have been campaigning passionately against Elliott, partly on the charge that when his father was president in 1937 he would not allow the "Exodus," with a load of refugees, to land in Florida en route to Cuba.

Whatever may have been the facts in this 30-year-old case, Elliott Roosevelt was then a youngster in college and had nothing to do with his father's policies. Furthermore, in later years, Elliott has taken over the work of his late mother in promoting bonds for Israel and has attended dinner after dinner in an effort to sell bonds and support Israel.

Despite this, some synagogues in the Miami Beach area are campaigning with the slogan "Vote for a Jew, don't vote for a Goy," while Mrs. Dermer and her husband are campaigning on the promise that if Dermer is elected mayor of Miami Beach he can help to stop the threat of war against Israel.

Note -- Most American Jews pride themselves on voting for a candidate for his abilities, not for his religion. In the last New York Mayor-Alty race, New York Jews had a chance to vote for Abe Beame, a fellow Jew and a Democrat, who opposed John Lindsay, a protestant Republican. Forty per cent of the New York Jews voted for Lindsay.

LIBERTY LOBBIES

The Liberty Lobby, whose founder regards Nazy Germany as the model for his brand of "Liberty," has joined the right-wing drive to recall Sen. Frank Church, D-Idaho.

Recall petitions have been printed in California by cosmetics distributor William Penn Patrick, a militant right-winger who ran against Ronald Reagan in the Republic primary because he considered Reagan too liberal.

Now Willis Carto, the chief patriarch and panjandrum of the Liberty Lobby, has thrown his organization into the fray. He is best known for his letters deploring the defeat of Adolf Hitler as a "tragedy for civilization" and advocating the shipment of American Negroes to Africa.

The Liberty Lobby has called a series of nine meetings throughout Idaho to set up a "telephone network" to organize a "grass roots" response to liberal legislation. The network also will be used to stir up opposition to church.

An Editor's Outlook

By Jenkin Lloyd Jones

THE TILTED SCALES

THE "LIBERAL" majority on the U.S. Supreme Court has a noble self-image. It is impossible to read its indignant opinions without concluding that here are gentlemen who see themselves as forthright defenders of little people against the clever and the powerful.

To this end, and particularly through its broad interpretations of the Fifth and Fourteenth Amendments, the court has, in the past seven years, radically changed the rules of criminal evidence in America.

The key cases in this change were the Mallory decision of June 24, 1957, the Escobedo decision of June 22, 1964, and the Miranda case of June 13, 1966. The stars must be in great position for American criminals around mid-June.

MALLORY, a confessed Washington rapist who was sentenced to death in federal court, was turned loose by the supreme justices on the grounds that too long a time (2 p.m. until the next morning) elapsed between his arrest and his arraignment.

At 8 p.m., after his dinner, Mallory signed the typed confession and went to bed.

The Supreme Court held that the delay violated the defendant's constitutional rights. A short time after his release Mallory was arrested for a similar crime in Philadelphia.

DANNY ESCOBEDO, a 22-year-old Chicago Mexican, was convicted of murdering his brother-in-law after he had made damaging statements to the assistant state's attorney, which were later admitted in evidence.

The court ruled that Escobedo must go free because he was not permitted to have his attorney present while being questioned, nor was he told he need say nothing.

For the majority, Justice Goldberg said: "A system of criminal law enforcement which comes to depend on the 'confession' will, in the long run, be less reliable and more subject to abuses than a system which depends on extrinsic evidence independently secured through skillful investigation."

But in the dissent Justice Harlan said the rule "unjustifiably fetters legitimate police investigation." Justice Stewart remarked that there is nothing in the Constitution which "requires police to give advice." And Justice White added:

"By abandoning the voluntary-involuntary test for admissability of confessions, the court seems driven by the notion that it is uncivilized law enforcement to use an accused's own admissions against him at his trial.... The right to counsel now not only entitles the accused to counsel's advice and aid in preparing for trial, but stands as an impenetrable barrier to any interrogation once the accused has become a suspect. . .The rule is impossible to administer unless police cars are equipped with public defenders."

ON MARCH 3, 1963, a citizen of Phoenix named Miranda kidnaped and raped an 18-year-old girl. She picked him out of a police line-up, and he later wrote out a statement admitting and describing the crime. He was promptly convicted, but the Supreme Court set him free, again on grounds largely based on the Escobedo case.

The Fifth Amendment says that no man "shall be compelled in any criminal case to be a witness against himself."

The Supreme Court majority has decided that any police interrogation is equivalent to a "criminal case." This, Justice Harlan, Stewart and White describe as "poor constitutional law that will ultimately discourage any confession at all."

And Justice Harlan added: "We know that some crimes cannot be solved without confessions and that the court is taking a real risk with society's welfare in imposing its new regime on the country."

IN THE meantime, the incidence of crimes of violence is rising about four times as fast as population. City parks are empty after sundown. The streets of Washington are unsafe at night. Criminal courts of our great cities are so clogged, and conviction under the Supreme Court restrictions is often so uncertain, that reduction of the charge below that of the crime actually committed is becoming the rule rather than the exception.

Therefore, Sen. Sam Ervin Jr. (D-N.C.) and 15 other senators have introduced a joint resolution calling for a constitutional amendment to forbid the Supreme Court or any lesser court from throwing out a conviction based on a voluntary confession.

No one defends the rack or the rubber hose, but the question is: "Has the Warren court, by its stringent restrictions on police inquiry, made punishment so difficult that the safety of honest citizens is in growing peril? If the court is to be curbed, it can only be curbed by constitutional amendment. That is, if the court doesn't decide that the amendment is unconstitutional.

TEACHERS CUT CLASS LINES

Seek Money For Drive To Unionize Two Million Instructors

New York: -- At the Madison Square Garden "mass-in" one recent night, at least 7,000 teachers, mostly young, "bulged - in" with true proletarian enthusiasm. They sat shoulder to shoulder with sewer workers, subway token sellers, motormen and zoo attendants. And with 12,000 other workers they roared in unison against the state government.

The other car, one of their leaders said this was the true sign of the times on the education-organization front -- no class lines, just picket lines -- and solidarity with the rest of labor in every large city until the American Federation of Teachers grows into the land's biggest union. And he meant it.

He put the national goal at well over 1.5 million in the "new," revitalized American Federation of Teachers (AFL-CIO).

In response to a sharp and quizzical look on this correspondent's face, the teachers' leader, Al Shanker, vice president of the national federation and leader of the huge 47,000 - member New York United Federation of Teachers -- largest local of its kind in the free world -- outlined his battle plan.

"First you must understand," said the lanky, youngish militant, "our own new fearlessness and militancy. First, we were arrested over in Woodbridge, N.J., and just a few weeks ago in Baltimore 120 of our people were hauled in by sheriffs and their deputies. We defied court injunctions. And we'll continue wherever they rule we can't strike or picket."

The federation's objectives are the big cities, he added, ticking them off -- Los Angeles, San Francisco, Portland (Ore.), Buffalo, Milwaukee and the Twin Cities. In the suburbs of New York alone, he reckoned, 100,000 teachers were "ready for unionization." Out on Long Island, said he, there soon would be union elections among 25,000 teachers.

The recruiters are there in fields the public just doesn't yet see, continued Shanker.

"There are the indigenous poor," he said.

These according to the teachers' leader will total "hundreds of thousands in the next two years and perhaps a million in the next decade." Under the federal government's new project, the "poverty women" will be hired as assistant teachers. They will assist right in the classrooms. They'll aid the younger children by talking in their native languages.

The women from the slum and ghetto areas will help children--whose problems they know best--with their clothes and free lunches and to prepare for the return home. The ladies will read aloud to them, translate into English if necessary, keep the tougher ones, the maladjusted, the retarded, from battling each other. And the women will mark papers as well.

Both in New York and at the American Federation of Teachers' national headquarters in Chicago, these "assistant teachers" will come under the AFT jurisdiction. They'll be approached both on the school level and through the "community union" operation near their homes. No doubt the jurisdiction is vast.

But so are other teaching echelons. The federation will go after the parochial school systems as well as private schools and community colleges.

"This is a vast field and untouched," said Shanker. "Most of the latter employ the equivalent of high school teachers. In this city alone, they number over 100,000. This is the future."

New organization techniques of this future will be unveiled at the AFT's 51st Annual Convention in Washington's Hotel Hilton beginning Aug. 21. Militancy will be the motif: The spotlight will be on those who struck St. John's University; those who were arrested and jailed in New Jersey; those who were cooped up en masse in Baltimore.

Speakers will report on "how it was done" in Washington where the big Local 6 -- one of 675 such units across the land -- won the first election ever held in the city's educational system. Others will report on the "amazing" growth of the AFT from 48,000 in 1960 to 140,000 today. Undoubtedly the 1,000 delegates will roar support of the gargantuan New York local which plans to strike the New York City school system early in September.

No doubt, the teachers are on the march. They plan special concentrations in Indiana, Ohio, Michigan and Illinois where a ban on such strikes of school systems is now being pushed.

But it all depends on the root of everything -- money. Until now the national office, presided over by the bantam Charles Cogen, has had only nine organizers in the field. The AFT hopes to move to Washington and take on triple that number. But the money just isn't pouring out of the AFL-CIO Industrial Union Dept. as it did ($1.1 million) in the past few years.

The big unions, which pledged to back their moral support with hard currency, just are not giving to the IUD's "Special Organizing Fund."

So the teachers now are trying to get their more proletarian brothers and sisters, as they say inside labor, to unclog the financial pipelines as well as wipe out the class lines. But money or no money, they're on the move.

Danger Lurks For Children

ST. LOUIS -- Chances of children being struck by cars are greater now that schools are closing for the summer. Teachers stress safety for nine months each year, but parents must take over this life-protecting responsibility during vacation time, according to the Automobile Club of Missouri. Parents should warn children to stay out of streets, to be aware of traffic when they do come near streets and to play only in yards or playgrounds.

Motorists also share in the responsibility of protecting youngsters. The Auto Club says a child chasing a ball is not likely to stop to look both ways before running into a street. Drivers must watch for children at play and take extra precautions in driving, especially in residential areas. Motorists should also remember that children are out on bicycles, roller skates and scooters during the day, when they normally are in school. The driver who expects to see a youngster in his path is the one prepared to stop short of tragedy.

Parents should warn their children that drivers cannot always see them in time to stop, warns the AAA, especially if they dart from between parked cars into a busy street. Even residential areas can become hazardous if children do not watch out for vehicles. A driver may be temporarily blinded by the sun and fail to see a child dash off the curb.

Children should be taught to look both ways before crossing any street, and to walk, not run from the curb. If there are no sidewalks, children should always walk on the left, facing the traffic.

Safety rules cannot be repeated too often to children, says the Auto Club.

Publicity Threat Rids Senate of Unpaid FoodBills

WASHINGTON (AP) — Sen. E. L. Bartlett figures he has hit on a sure strategy for getting his colleagues to pay their Capitol food bills: Just hint at publicizing the names of the delinquent diners.

That's what the Alaska Democrat did last month when he made it known that some senators—whom he didn't name at the time—owed thousands of dollars to the several Senate restaurants, cafeterias and snack bars.

Bartlett happily told a Senate Appropriations subcommittee Friday that his strategy worked. According to Philip L. Roof, a Senate executive assistant, bills totaling about $17,000 were quickly paid and there are no current delinquencies.

He said some of the delinquent food bills had run as high as $5,000 with $3,000 the largest amount owed by any single senator in May.

Bartlett noted that just to let the news media know about such delinquencies seemed to have produced "a great outpouring of funds."

As currently operated, the various Senate eating places will run up an estimated deficit this year of $363,000— a tab taxpayers must pick up.

Lou Connects, Carlton Wins

By the Associated Press

Steve Carlton of the Cardinals and Curt Simmons of the Cubs had a scoreless pitchers duel going for five innings Friday night in St. Louis when the Cards' Lou Brock ended it with a two-run homer for a 2-1 St. Louis victory.

Brock's clout for the Cards followed an error by Cub third sacker Ron Santo.

Carlton's bid for a shutout spoiled in the bottom of the eighth when the Cubs' Ted Savage hit a bases-empty homer.

Carlton held the Cubs hitless until the sixth when shortstop Don Kessinger drilled an infield hit off Ed Spiezio's glove at Third. Carlton is now 4-1 for the year.

Simmons, 2-5, gave up only five hits in seven innings. The Cubs have lost five times in the last six starts. They meet the Cards again today with Ferguson Jenkins (5-3 going against big Bob Gibson (6-4) of the Cards.

Lightning struck Atlanta's Jay Ritchie the second time around and although he had to wait awhile for the thunderclap, Cincinnati Manager Dave Bristol isn't complaining.

Ritchie fought his way out of a bases-loaded, none out jam, leaving the Reds' winning run stranded on third base in the ninth inning Friday night, but when he climbed out on the limb again in the 11th, Vada Pinson didn't let him off.

Pinson's fourth hit of the night drove in Tommy Helms with the winning run and lifted the first place Reds to a 5-4 comeback victory over the slumping Braves.

In other National League games Philadelphia topped Houston 5-3, and Pittsburgh rapped Los Angeles 5-3. New York's game at San Francisco was postponed by rain.

The Braves were leading 4-3 on Hank Aaron's two-run homer which erased a 3-2 Cincinnati edge in the ninth. But the Reds struck back quickly. Tony Perez jolted Pat Jarvis with a leadoff double. Deron Johnson's triple tied the score and put the winning run on third with none out.

Tommy Helms was purposely walked and then Ritchie came on to walk Art Shamsky intentionally. That set up a force play at any base, but Ritchie didn't need one. He struck out Leo Cardenas and Don Pavletich and then got Floyd Robinson on a pop fly, stranding the runners.

It remained 4-4 until the 11th when Helms opened with a single and one out later, moved to third on Cardenas' hit. Pavletich walked, loading the bases.

Ritchie fanned pinch hitter Jim Coker for the second out, but Pinson ended his charmed life with a game-ending single.

Joe Torre had three hits for the Braves and drove in Atlanta's first two runs.

Dick Farrell, a former Astro, saved Dick Ellsworth's victory over Houston with 3 1-3 innings of relief.

Farrell allowed three hits and one run but shut off a Houston rally in the sixth when he relieved Ellsworth. The Phillies jumped in front with two runs in each of the first two innings against loser Chris Zachary, 0-6.

Ex-Dodger Maury Wills drove in Pittsburgh's tie-breaking run with a seventh inning triple as the Pirates stopped the Dodgers.

Wills, playing in Los Angeles for the first time since being traded, had two hits and scored twice for the Pirates.

The Dodgers jumped off to a 3-0 lead but Roberto Clemente, who drove in two runs with a pair of hits, and Wills brought the Pirates back.

As the too - bright son said: "Maybe hard work never killed anyone, but I'll bet you never heard of anybody who rested to death."

Blodgett Upsets New Hamburg

Blodgett scored a major upset the fourth for reliefer Gilbert in the opening round of the SEMO Robert, who pitched hitless balls softball association tournament for the remainder of the game, last night, defeating New Hamburg Schindler, 1-0. In the other but the harm had already been game last night, Kelso edged Oran 1-0.

Larry Cooper scored the only run of the game, that being for Blodgett. An over throw at first advanced him to second and a wild pitch to third before a sacrifice fly by Alvin Farrenburg sent the lead run home.

The win was Blodgett's fifth of the season against two losses.

Marion Oakley was the winning pitcher, going the seven inning stunt, allowing three hits, no runs, and one walk.

New Hamburg hurlers gave up no walks.

Blodgett will mett Kelso Sunday evening at 9 p.m. for their next tournament game. New Hamburg and Oran advanced into the losers bracket.

Eight teams are entered in the tournament with the winner reserving the right to advance to the state playoffs.

Tonight's action at the Kelso field will see the number two seeded squad, Benton Aces meeting the Bell City nine.

Blodgett's defensively minded softball nine beat the Schindler's and two of the leading softball pitchers in the state, John Watkins and Gilbert Robert, 1-0 on two fielding errors and a sacrafice fly by Alvin Farrenburg.

Watkins pitched the first four innings, allowing only one hit and one run before being lifted in

By BOB GILBERT
Associated Press Sports Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Hill would like nothing better than to be a copycat— to match Dave Stockton's pattern of success two weeks ago— and he is halfway there.

Hill, a powerful tee shot artist from Jackson, Mich., carried a four-stroke lead into today's third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament. He had a 9-under-par 131.

That was the margin Stockton held in the same round when he won the Colonial Invitation at Fort Worth, Tex. In fact, Hill has shot a 65-66 here as did Stockton at Fort Worth, Tex. The weather is even similar.

"Dave had a super game out there, and so far in this tournament I've played my best golf this year— my best 36 holes since I won the Denver Open in 1961," Hill said.

Challenging Hill as the third round began were three players tied with 5-under-par 135s— Gary Player, Bruce Crampton and Chuck Courtney.

For Player, who returned to the tour recently after six weeks at his ranch in South Africa, the past two weeks have been amazing. He played well in losing a playoff to Miller Barber last week at Oklahoma City.

Home Materials hits were scattered. Spitzmiller collected the only extra base hit by blasting a double.

Anchor Toy posted its second victory against no losses in Babe Ruth league play last night, edging the Bank of Sikeston, 6-4.

McCauley and Hailey led the five hit parade of Anchor with two hits each. One of Hailey's hits was a double.

Hei won the game for Anchor while Dacus was credited with the loss.

Lefler led the Bank of Sikeston's hitting with a double. Four hits were scattered throughout the lineup.

Lou Connects, Carlton Wins

By the Associated Press

Steve Carlton of the Cardinals and Curt Simmons of the Cubs had a scoreless pitchers duel going for five innings Friday night in St. Louis when the Cards' Lou Brock ended it with a two-run homer for a 2-1 St. Louis victory.

Brock's clout for the Cards followed an error by Cub third sacker Ron Santo.

Carlton's bid for a shutout spoiled in the bottom of the eighth when the Cubs' Ted Savage hit a bases-empty homer.

Carlton held the Cubs hitless until the sixth when shortstop Don Kessinger drilled an infield hit off Ed Spiezio's glove at Third. Carlton is now 4-1 for the year.

Simmons, 2-5, gave up only five hits in seven innings. The Cubs have lost five times in the last six starts. They meet the Cards again today with Ferguson Jenkins (5-3 going against big Bob Gibson (6-4) of the Cards.

Lightning struck Atlanta's Jay Ritchie the second time around and although he had to wait awhile for the thunderclap, Cincinnati Manager Dave Bristol isn't complaining.

Ritchie fought his way out of a bases-loaded, none out jam, leaving the Reds' winning run stranded on third base in the ninth inning Friday night, but when he climbed out on the limb again in the 11th, Vada Pinson didn't let him off.

Pinson's fourth hit of the night drove in Tommy Helms with the winning run and lifted the first place Reds to a 5-4 comeback victory over the slumping Braves.

In other National League games Philadelphia topped Houston 5-3, and Pittsburgh rapped Los Angeles 5-3. New York's game at San Francisco was postponed by rain.

The Braves were leading 4-3 on Hank Aaron's two-run homer which erased a 3-2 Cincinnati edge in the ninth. But the Reds struck back quickly. Tony Perez jolted Pat Jarvis with a leadoff double. Deron Johnson's triple tied the score and put the winning run on third with none out.

Tommy Helms was purposely walked and then Ritchie came on to walk Art Shamsky intentionally. That set up a force play at any base, but Ritchie didn't need one. He struck out Leo Cardenas and Don Pavletich and then got Floyd Robinson on a pop fly, stranding the runners.

It remained 4-4 until the 11th when Helms opened with a single and one out later, moved to third on Cardenas' hit. Pavletich walked, loading the bases.

Ritchie fanned pinch hitter Jim Coker for the second out, but Pinson ended his charmed life with a game-ending single.

Joe Torre had three hits for the Braves and drove in Atlanta's first two runs.

Dick Farrell, a former Astro, saved Dick Ellsworth's victory over Houston with 3 1-3 innings of relief.

Farrell allowed three hits and one run but shut off a Houston rally in the sixth when he relieved Ellsworth. The Phillies jumped in front with two runs in each of the first two innings against loser Chris Zachary, 0-6.

Ex-Dodger Maury Wills drove in Pittsburgh's tie-breaking run with a seventh inning triple as the Pirates stopped the Dodgers.

Wills, playing in Los Angeles for the first time since being traded, had two hits and scored twice for the Pirates.

The Dodgers jumped off to a 3-0 lead but Roberto Clemente, who drove in two runs with a pair of hits, and Wills brought the Pirates back.

As the too - bright son said: "Maybe hard work never killed anyone, but I'll bet you never heard of anybody who rested to death."

LOU BROCK socked a two-run homer and Steve Carlton pitched a three hitter as the Cardinals Whipped Chicago, 2-1. It was Lou's 11th of the season.

Blodgett Upsets New Hamburg

Blodgett scored a major upset in the opening round of the SEMO softball association tournament last night, defeating New Hamburg Schindler, 1-0. In the other game last night, Kelso edged Oran 1-0.

Eight teams are entered in the Blodgett tournament with the winner re-advanced him to second and a wild pitch to third before a sacrifice fly by Alvin Farrenburg sent the lead run home.

Tonight's action at the Kelso field will see the number two seeded squad, Benton Aces meeting the Bell City nine.

Blodgett's defensively minded softball nine beat the Schindler's and two of the leading softball pitchers in the state, John Watkins and Gilbert Robert, 1-0 on two fielding errors and a sacrafice fly by Alvin Farrenburg.

Watkins pitched the first four innings, allowing only one hit and one run before being lifted in the fourth for reliefer Gilbert Robert, who pitched hitless balls for the remainder of the game, but the harm had already been done.

Larry Cooper scored the only run of the game, that being for Blodgett. An over throw at first advanced him to second and a wild pitch to third before a sacrifice fly by Alvin Farrenburg sent the lead run home.

The win was Blodgett's fifth of the season against two losses. Marion Oakley was the winning pitcher, going the seven inning stunt, allowing three hits, no runs, and one walk.

New Hamburg hurlers gave up no walks.

Blodgett will mett Kelso Sunday evening at 9 p.m. for their next tournament game. New Hamburg and Oran advanced into the losers bracket.

Hill Carries 4-Stroke Lead In Memphis Open

By BOB GILBERT
Associated Press Sports Writer

MEMPHIS, Tenn. (AP) — Dave Hill would like nothing better than to be a copycat— to match Dave Stockton's pattern of success two weeks ago— and he is halfway there.

Hill, a powerful tee shot artist from Jackson, Mich., carried a four-stroke lead into today's third round of the $100,000 Memphis Open Golf Tournament. He had a 9-under-par 131.

That was the margin Stockton held in the same round when he won the Colonial Invitation at Fort Worth, Tex. In fact, Hill has shot a 65-66 here as did Stockton at Fort Worth, Tex. The weather is even similar.

"Dave had a super game out there, and so far in this tournament I've played my best golf this year— my best 36 holes since I won the Denver Open in 1961," Hill said.

Challenging Hill as the third round began were three players tied with 5-under-par 135s— Gary Player, Bruce Crampton and Chuck Courtney.

For Player, who returned to the tour recently after six weeks at his ranch in South Africa, the past two weeks have been amazing. He played well in losing a playoff to Miller Barber last week at Oklahoma City.

Congressman Says Research Can Aid Cotton

SAN FRANCISCO -- The city of San Francisco is not only an ideal location for an annual meeting, but also a proper forum from which to speak about a topic which is of interest to us all. In California, cotton literally is king for as many of you here know, cotton is the largest money crop of all the various agricultural products that this great state grows to meet the expanding needs of our nation.

California is proud to say that it is supplying a type of cotton that is very much in demand, and we hope that we can continue to supply the mounting needs of the textile industry.

I fully realize that your association is made up of affiliated organizations who encompass the entire cotton belt of the United States, ranging from the tip of Southern Virginia, throughout the southern states, the southwest and the far west. Each of these areas to a great degree produces a type of cotton which is unique in quality from region to region. United States mills demand a type of cotton with a long and strong fiber possessing good quality factors.

Most of the states, in the cotton belt can say with pride that they do produce a type of cotton which is of high quality and can be sold in the market place. I feel that each of you whose livelihood depends upon the marketing of cotton will agree to the basic proposition that you cannot sell cotton for which there is no demand.

Here is California our cotton producers have justifiable pride in the type of crop they grow and hopefully the basis for this pride will continue.

The American Cotton Shippers Association is to be congratulated for its progressive views with regard to their long standing demand for the encouragement of the production of good quality cotton and the discouragement of cotton which serves no other use than to fill up space in government warehouses throughout the cotton belt.

I wholeheartedly agree with the position you have constantly urged upon the United States Department of Agriculture for increased acreage in areas where good quality cotton is grown. I, along with each and every one of you, was unhappy when the department of agriculture did not lift the skip-row planting restrictions for the 1967-68 crop year. This, I am afraid, was a great mistake and the very nature of such a decision is hard to understand in light of the acute shortage of cotton of an inch and longer.

The latest statistics from the Commodity Credit Corporation show that there are about 2,000,000 bales of this type of cotton in CCC warehouses and this figure is diminishing rapidly.

Recent heavy rainfall in the San Joaquin Valley in the area between Bakersfield and Merced will reduce yields to the point that it is doubtful that there will be enough long staple cotton for domestic mills. It has been estimated that this year's crop in the area will be reduced by possibly 50,000 bales.

Another threat to the California producer is posed by the pink bollworm which already has had its affect on the quality and yield of Arizona cotton and California cotton south of the Tehachapis.

I would like to commend the initative taken by the Western Cotton Growers Association through the support of the state assembly of California for levying upon themselves a 50 cents per bale charge to be used for pink bollworm eradication program. The state of California and the federal government will provide matching funds for this program. This is an excellent example of cooperation by private enterprise and state and federal government. In intend to work vigorously for the $1,200,000 appropriation required at the federal level for the fight against the pink bollworm infestation in this state.

Unless we want to see the textile industry continue its pattern of substituting man-made fibers for cotton, we must develop a program that enables areas which grow good staple cotton of a high quality to produce to their fullest potential. Those areas which produce cotton that ends up in government warehouses on a permanent basis should be encouraged to grow better quality cotton or switch to another type of agricultural product.

This year's loan values and grade differentials which discourage low quality cotton, should be continued. These measures indicate a realization of the fact that American agriculture has undergone a tremendous change. The small farm is being consolidated into the large farm. The margin of profit is being constantly reduced. Capital outlays for necessary farm equipment are rising. One of the purposes of the Agriculture Adjustment Act of 1965 was to reduce non-productive cotton acreage.

Today cotton is at its crossroads. Through technological advances and efficient and well-financed promotional campaign, the manufacturers of man-made fiber products are taking markets away from cotton fabric producers. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act of 1965 which your associated actively supported is a new and imaginative program which has the potential to bring about increased utilization of cotton. The active support of all agricultural organizations is needed, however, to insure the future success of this venture.

The cotton merchants and other first buyers, as I understand, have been delegated by the Cotton Board, established by this legislation, to act as the collectors of the one dollar per bale from the cotton producer. I realize that this will most likely pose an extra burden upon you as individuals, but your full support and cooperation can guarantee in the long-run the success of this program which hopefully can be measured in profits for the entire cotton community.

The cotton industry is to be complimented for meeting head on the competitive threats posed by man-made fibers. You have accepted the challenge. You are moving forward. You have realized that progress cannot be achieved without the application of scientific research and the development of new processes for the growing treatment and spinning of cotton. Continued research and active promotion of the fruits of this research can hopefully re-establish cotton as the primary fiber used by the textile industry.

An equally and sometimes seemingly insoluble problem is the establishment of price rates which will make United States cotton competitive in the world market. Many of us in congress had hoped that the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 would provide the framework to help United States cotton re-capture its rightful place in world trade. Our great expectations are yet to be realized and hopefully United States cotton prices can be established at competitive levels.

With the passage of the agricultural act of 1965 congress gave the secretary the vehicle through which he can help to expand United States cotton and other agricultural experts if implemented properly. I believe that the secretary should abide by the intent of congress to lower cotton prices and expand exports.

The United States government is faced with many commitments throughout the world and in our eagerness to make friends among the emerging nations. Perhaps sufficient thought was not given to the fact that the United States production of cotton could be placed in jeopardy by these well-intentioned commitments.

Earlier this year, more self-help by India was urged by the congress while approving emergency food assistance. Last year I visited India and saw for myself the hunger and suffering caused by a shortage of food. The need for increased productivity of food crops in India is undeniable. The Indian government has lowered prices on food crops and has encouraged the production of non-food crops. This coupled with a population explosion and a severe drought has resulted in mass starvation.

One answer to this problem is to encourage India to produce more food on cropland now devoted to non-food crops in world surplus. India is presently growing about 20,000,000 acres of cotton or nearly double the acreage being grown in the United States. Yet, India's yield per acre is less than one-fourth of the yield in this country. However, India's wheat productivity per acre is about 45 per cent that of the United States. According to the department of agriculture: "From a physical and scientific standpoint -- virtually every acre of land now producing cotton could produce crops used for food or feed." The United States with a cotton surplus, can supply India with cotton, thus helping both nations.

The United States balance of payments has reached an intolerable level and unfortunately the importation of foreign textiles and yarns comprise the larger part of this imbalance. President Johnson is aware of this acute problem and every member of congress is hopeful that a sound and justifiable solution can be reached by our trade negotiations.

Your very attendance, your association's willingness to come forth with logical ideas to propose to the federal government on the topics which I have briefly touched on is a tribute to your energy, ingenuity and leadership in the cotton industry.

I am happy that for the most part I share your views and I will do my best to help you achieve these worthwhile objectives

Flagpole Tragedy Likened to Famed Iwo Jima Scene

SPRINGFIELD, Va. (AP) — A witness said it was like the famous Marine flag-raising at Iwo Jima.

Except this time it was six Army enlisted men raising the flag pole. And instead of a battle-pocked hill on a distant island, the scene was a Little League baseball field in a Washington suburb.

Then the 40-foot metal pole swayed. The six soldiers strained, trying to hold it in place.

But the pole toppled, hitting a 7,200-volt power line. Electricity crackled down the pole, spitting and hissing in blue and white flashes.

The six soldiers fell dead in the mud, their clothes smoking, some of them burned almost beyond recognition.

The Army identified the six soldiers, all assigned to the community assistance project from Ft. Belvoir, Va., as: Pvt. Charles P. Oliver, Vermilion, Ohio; Spec. 4 Kenneth G. Steiner, St. Ann, Mo.; Pvt. Marvin D. Harrison, Jacksonville, Fla.; Pvt. Paul D. Briggs, Waco, Tex.; Pvt. Anthony B. Evans, Uniontown, Pa.; Pvt. Charles M. Whaleyn, Aberdeen, Ohio.

"It looked like that group in the Iwo Jima statue," said 16-year-old Bob Ramey, who witnessed the midafternoon tragedy.

Because the ground was wet, would-be rescuers, including four other Ft. Belvoir soldiers in the 10-man work party, were warned away from the accident scene until the power could be cut off.

Dr. William Enos, a Virginia medical examiner, said the men all died virtually instantly.

The victims had been part of a detail working all week to ready the Little League field near the Army base. It was for use by teams of youngsters from Ft. Belvoir and surrounding suburban areas.

Ann Landers Visits An Evacuation Hospital

BY SAUL LOCKHART AND JOHN DONNELLY
Special to The Sun-Times

QUI NHON, Vietnam - In the emergency ward of the 85th Evacuation Hospital here, a wounded soldier of the 1st Cavalry (Air-Mobile) Division was being prepared for operation. As a medic cut away his muddy fatigues and a nurse prepared him for a transfusion, a woman, in a basic-black cocktail dress watched the soldier's face. He looked up, then stared uncomprehendingly into Ann Landers' eyes - probably certain that she was an illusion.

She really was there, though, touring the hospitals of Vietnam, talking to as many men as she could; joshing, gently chiding, laughing with the wounded of this war. She saw the walking wounded and the near dead, the silent, frequently comatose GIs in the intensive care units and the humorists in the convalescent wards.

Story Of A Headache

At the 67th Evacuation Hospital, also in Qui Nhon, she asked a soldier with a turban of white gauze wrapped around his head:

"What happened to you, fella?"

"I gotta headache," replied Pfc. Francis McCloskey of Johnstown, Pa.

"How did you get a headache?.. asked Miss Landers in straightman fashion.

"When a bullet hit it," came the reply.

The columnist joined the rest of the ward in laughter.

Officially, Miss Landers was on a hand-shaking tour arranged by the USO; and she conducted herself like a trouper: Most VIP tourists in Vietnam stick to a schedule, 10 or 15 minutes to a ward, two or three hours to a battle zone. But Miss Landers visited virtually every bed in every ward, talking to each patient for as long as he cared or had the strength to.

She Meets A Surgeon

In the back of Ward 5 of the 85th Evacuation Hospital, is a small area where on duty medical personnel gather to talk and unwind. Against a wall, a surgeon, his eyes tired and harried under the green operating cap, leaned drinking black coffee and smoking a cigaret.

An officer accompanying Miss Landers volunteered the information that "he hasn't had his boots off in 48 hours," and still had to operate on the newly arrived patients. She asked the doctor about it.

"We're getting the overflow from the Eye Corps," he replied laconally, Eye Corps is what people in Vietnam call the 1st Corps Area, the northernmost military sector, where GI's have been fighting some of the war's most bitter and costly battles in and around the demilitarized zone.

'Seen Enough Bodies'

"You're doing a magnificient job, doctor," said Miss Landers.

"I've seen enough bodies," the surgeon replied.

"How long have you got left?" she asked.

"Twenty three days and a wake-up." In Vietnam, privates are not the only ones who keep track of their last days, and even surgeons refuse to count their last morning as a full day.

"When you get back to the States and think back on this, you'll realize what a wonderful job you've all been doing," Miss Landers said.

"When I get back to the States," said the doctor, "I'll try to forget everything that has happened."

In Vietnam, some people no longer can be impressed, either by celebrities or by themselves. Outside the ward, Miss Landers turned to the hospital's executive officer and said simply: "What can you say to men like that? They're simply magnificent."

The Prison Ward

Another ward was surrounded with barbed wire and guarded by MP's. "What is that?" she asked.

The prisoner ward, she was told. Walking through the ward, she smiled compassionately at the wounded. Some stared sullenly back, but others smiled in reply. It is doubtful that many of the VC knew of Ann Landers, but a smile has been known to work wonders.

Swathed from head to toe in bandages, with one leg in traction, S-Sgt. Antonio Milstead of Harlingen, Tex., grinned up at Miss Landers.

"The worst is over," Milstead said, "besides, I'm one of the lucky ones."

Miss Landers, eyeing the sizable percentage of his body that was bandaged, asked incredulously: "How's that?"

"Well," said Milstead, "I only got four months 'til I get out of the Army. The way I'm wounded, it'll take me that long to recover. Now that poor guy over there," he nodded toward a sleeping figure three beds away, "he's only got two weeks to go. He'll be healing on his own time."

"What fantastic spirit," Miss Landers mused later, "a guy walking around with a bullet hole in his head, and he's got a 'headache.' And Milstead is concerned only that he convalesce on Uncle Sam's time and not on his own."

Under Close Guard

Leaving a ward, Miss Landers noticed for the first time the MPs who had shadowed her everytime she had been outside all day.

"Who," she asked, "are they?"

"That's your security, Ma'am," replied an officer. "Today is Ho Chi Minh's birthday."

That night, Miss Landers stayed at the house of the commanding general of the Qui Nhon support command. An MP was stationed on the balcony outside her window. The next morning, flying to visit another hospital at Cam Ranh Bay, armed helicopters flew escort. It is all part of being a celebrity in Vietnam, and must be borne.

Miss Landers undoubtedly has gained more than just an appreciation of GI humor, or a knowledge of what war can do to men. In the space of 12 hours, she visited more than 500 men in two hospitals, and they left their mark. Earlier, as she had watched wounded men being wheeled to the operating tables, she had mused, almost to herself: "There must be a better way. There must be a better way."

It was something she said to herself again and again during her stay in this war-torn land.

English Tramp, French Playboy One and Same

BLACKPOOL, England (AP) — Julian Ellis-Morris dressed like a tramp and sold razor blades, shampoo and soap door to door in this resort on the west coast of England.

But in Paris the gray-haired old Englishman was a wealthy eccentric who lavished chocolates, flowers and cigarettes on two girls at the Folies Bergere.

When he died in March at 75, he left a fortune of $174,697 including $2,800 to the two Parisian entertainers.

He bequeathed $1,400 each to Micheline Roine and Nicole Delattre, $140 to Michelina's daughter Danielle and $350 each to the unnamed women owners of two Montmartre hotels where he stayed during his jaunts in the French capital.

The double life of Ellis-Morris was revealed Wednesday when his will was published.

Dressed in an old army overcoat and tattered canvas shoes, he went from house to house selling cheap toilet goods from a tray.

At night he returned to a luxurious bungalow where he had three television sets and two automobiles, including a chauffeur-driven Daimler limousine. He vacationed at Nice, Cannes and Paris.

During World War II he swept the floors at an aircraft factory.

He kept his private life secret, though he once told friends that when Queen Elizabeth II and Prince Philip visited Blackpool he was invited to meet them aboard the royal train.

Once, he said, the Prince of Wales — now the Duke of Windsor -- sent a message to his table as he dined in London.

According to his death certificate, Ellis-Morris was the son of a London auctioneer.

"He looked like a tramp and talked about being skint (broke)" said Johnny Miller, the steward at a Blackpool Working Men's Club.

Yet he was a regular customer— seat A15 — for 15 years at the Folies Bergere. Each night he sent chocolates, flowers and cigarettes backstage to Micheline Roine and Nicole Delattre.

When the shy old man plucked up courage to meet them he and the girls became close friends.

His closest friends were in the Salvation Army. He stayed at its hostels and attended its services every Sunday.

He left the biggest part of his money, $98,000, to Annie Graves, a 36-year-old Salvation Army worker.

"I am surprised as anyone," said Miss Graves. "I only used to talk to him and ask him how he was."

MALDEN -- The Brown Construction Company of Dexter was the apparent low bidder for a contract to build new school units for the Malden school district R-1.

Its bid of $365,596 was $404 under the second low bidder, the Smith & Livingston Construction Company of Poplar Bluff.

Bids were opened at 8 p.m. yesterday in the science room of the Malden High School in the presence of the Malden School District board of education and architect Art R. Jablonsky of the Poplar Bluff architectural firm of Drew & Jablonsky.

Five bids were received, Smith & Livingston bid $366,000; the Ryan Construction Company of Sikeston bid $389,388; Walker Construction Company of Malden bid $395,035.90, and Huffman Brothers, Steele, Mo., bid $419,172.70.

Lake Yields Angler's Wallet 5 Years Later

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Five years ago Earl Hall, West Plains auctioneer, was fishing on a farm lake north of here.

He hooked a bass and turned over his canoe while trying to land his catch. The bass got away. Hall nearly drowned, and he lost his billfold which contained $500 in cash and several hundred dollars in checks.

For several days he and others dragged the lake. Divers spent hours on the bottom of the lake. They had no luck. Neither did people who came to the lake to fish for the cash rather than the bass.

Among those who did not forget the event of five years ago was Elmer Killion, West Plains. While fishing there this week he spotted a large leather billfold floating near some weeds. He retrieved it and discovered it was the one lost by Hall.

The chain had rusted off, but the money was intact, although a little darker green. Also intact were the uncashed checks.

Hall was advised by his banker to send the bills to the Federal reserve bank in St. Louis to be replaced.

U THANT'S BIAS

In tracing the roots of the Middle East crisis, informed citizens can hardly fail to observe that U Thant, Secretary General of the United Nations, precipitated one of the worst developments in the situation.

This was Mr. U Thant's immediate, affirmative response to Egypt's demand for withdrawal of the U. N. peace-keeping force from positions along the Israeli border. It was not necessary for U Thant to take this action, for the peace-keeping force had been created by the U. N. General Assembly and not by the Secretary General himself. With this sudden, irresponsible action, U Thant opened the door to direct action to Col. Nasser of Egypt.

For example, with the almost overnight withdrawal of the U.N. troops, Nasser was able to send troops to blockade the narrow straits which control Israel's access to the Red Sea and its markets in Africa and Asia. Automatically, war tension was increased.

Western peoples should not overlook U Thant's strange behavior. In the past the Burmese neutralist who heads the bureaucratic machinery of the U. N. has gone all out to assert the U.N.'s authority in international disputes. But he made no such assertion of authority against the Egyptians, who are sponsored by the Soviet Union. He didn't even attempt to delay an action that was bound to promote the communist goal of stirring trouble in the oil-rich Middle East.

U Thant's action in the Israeli-Egyptian crisis is in striking contrast to his actions and statements with regard to the war in Vietnam. The U. N. Secretary General has used his office to try to bend the United States to his will, virtually adopting Hanoi's position on the aerial bombing and suggesting that the U. S., by its air raids against the Red regime, was on the verge of starting World War III.

U Thant's behavior, in this and other situations, gives abundant evidence of where his sympathies lie. Nasser's Egypt, of course, is one of the revolutionary states of the world. It is very close to the communist bloc countries. Nasser desires to oust the Western countries from their oil concessions in the Middle East, a goal which U Thant undoubtedly shares.

The bias U Thant has shown toward the Egyptians is all the more graphically illustrated by the failure of his office -- and of the Afro-Asian bloc in the U.N. --to pay any attention to other threats to the peace in the Middle East. Since the early 1960s, Egypt has had 50,000 soldiers occupying the little Red Sea country of Yemen, but U Thant and the U. N. have not condemned Egypt's aggression there.

For many months, Egyptian agents, infiltrators and saboteurs have been conducting a terrorist war against the vital British naval-air base of Aden at the southern end of the Red Sea and against the South Arabian Federation. But the U. N. persists in seeing no evil.

A three-man U. N. team visited Adan this spring, but refused to even consult with South Arabian Federation officials -- the lawful authorities in the area. U Thant had no word of reproach for the U. N.'s emissaries. He was too busy trying to pressure the United States into backing down before the forces of aggression in Southeast Asia. In another situation, involving Syrian sabotage raids, the U. N Secretary General was equally blind to aggression by a pro-communist country.

U Thant's position is understandable, in one sense. No doubt his sympathies are in line with the policies of the majority of countries in the United Nations organization. The more than 100 countries in the U.N., after all are largely nations from the communist world or the so-called Third World of backward, neutralist nations. Thus the majority of states in the U. N. fall into one of two classes: (1) communist or openly pro-communist nations, or (2) nations which envy America and want to penalize the U. S. for its affluence. Many of the new nations of Africa, which are so numerous in the U. N., belong to the second group.

The United Nations talks peace, but the U.N.'s definition of peace invariably is one which benefits the enemies of freedom. "Peace" for U Thant means Western withdrawal at every point and accommodation to the demands of the revolutionary states and movements. In short, U Thant's career as Secretary General clearly illustrates his anti-Western outlook -- an outlook which he clearly shares with the majority of states in the U.N. organization.

Federal Debt Reduced by $197 Gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal debt is $1.97 lower thanks to a high school government class.

Class members took up a collection and sent their check to the Treasury Department to help retire the debt which by comparison to their contribution is staggering— about $328 billion.

The class donation went into a special fund for debt retirement which will celebrate its sixth anniversary this month and probably will reach its first million dollars within the next year.

The fund isn't designed to wipe out the entire debt. It's simply a handy place for debt-retiring gifts.

Through April 30, the special fund had collected $909,066.82, most of it from the will of the late Susan Vaughan Clayton of Houston, Tex. She willed half the income from a trust fund to the federal government to help retire the debt.

She and Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., sponsor of the legislation which created the special fund, are the only donors of record. Bennett contributed the first $1,000. The Treasury Department declined to identify other donors— including the government class.

Donations since last July 1 totaled $93,173.84 and ran from one shilling— 14 cents— to $90,618.33 from the Clayton trust fund.

Before the special fund was created, the Treasury tossed any debt contributions into its general fund.

The $1.97 donation was accompanied by a brief note which merely said the money was to be used to reduce the debt.

Another young contributor apparently was alarmed by the size of the debt.

"I thought the least I could do (because I am too young to pay taxes) would be to save a little for our Treasury Department," he wrote. "So here is my contribution. I know it isn't much but if everyone pays a little we just might get out of our debts."

Phone Tip Leads to Missing Woman's Boby

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP)— The body of Mrs. Peggy Vogt, 17, of East St. Louis, Ill., was found by sheriff's deputies in St. Clair County Friday after they received a call from a lawyer who said his client knew where the body of a missing woman would be found.

The lawyer told authorities his client said he "held his hand over her mouth too long."

The body was found in a wooded area near a road junction at Cahokia, Ill. It was badly decomposed. Identification was made through the contents of a purse found nearby.

Mrs. Vogt's husband, Robert, is serving in Germany with the U.S. Army. She lived with her parents who reported her missing May 22 after she didn't return home after going out for a hamburger with a young man.

Investigators have located the lawyer but have not said if they have located the client.

Anti-Outsider Group Plays up Rain Image

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A car dealer has organized a "We Love Rain Society" aimed at keeping out-of-staters out of Washington.

The dealer, Dick Lewis, said Wednesday the idea is to cut down on the state's population growth by pushing the image that it rains a lot in Washington.

He said society members are instructed not to mail any sunny pictures out of the state, always wear a raincoat, and hide all bathing suits, sports shirts, sunglasses and sun tan lotion.

WATCHING THE CHILDREN will be necessary for motorists in Lilbourn until newness has worn off street paving. The smooth surfaces have lured children with bicycles and other toys. This is the intersection of South Sixth and Broughton Avenue.

Congressman Says Research Can Aid Cotton

SAN FRANCISCO -- The city of San Francisco is not only an ideal location for an annual meeting, but also a proper forum from which to speak about a topic which is of interest to us all. In California, cotton literally is king for as many of you here know, cotton is the largest money crop of all the various agricultural products that this great state grows to meet the expanding needs of our nation.

California is proud to say that it is supplying a type of cotton that is very much in demand, and we hope that we can continue to supply the mounting needs of the textile industry.

I fully realize that your association is made up of affiliated organizations who encompass the entire cotton belt of the United States, ranging from the tip of Southern Virginia, throughout the southern states, the southwest and the far west. Each of these areas to a great degree produces a type of cotton which is unique in quality from region to region. United States mills demand a type of cotton with a long and strong fiber possessing good quality factors.

Most of the states, in the cotton belt can say with pride that they do produce a type of cotton which is of high quality and can be sold in the market place. I feel that each of you whose livelihood depends upon the marketing of cotton will agree to the basic proposition that you cannot sell cotton for which there is no demand.

Here is California our cotton producers have justifiable pride in the type of crop they grow and hopefully the basis for this pride will continue.

The American Cotton Shippers Association is to be congratulated for its progressive views with regard to their long standing demand for the encouragement of the production of good quality cotton and the discouragement of cotton which serves no other use than to fill up space in government warehouses throughout the cotton belt.

I wholeheartedly agree with the position you have constantly urged upon the United States Department of Agriculture for increased acreage in areas where good quality cotton is grown. I, along with each and every one of you, was unhappy when the department of agriculture did not lift the skip-row planting restrictions for the 1967-68 crop year. This, I am afraid, was a great mistake and the very nature of such a decision is hard to understand in light of the acute shortage of cotton of an inch and longer.

The latest statistics from the Commodity Credit Corporation show that there are about 2,000,000 bales of this type of cotton in CCC warehouses and this figure is diminishing rapidly.

Recent heavy rainfall in the San Joaquin Valley in the area between Bakersfield and Merced will reduce yields to the point that it is doubtful that there will be enough long staple cotton for domestic mills. It has been estimated that this year's crop in the area will be reduced by possibly 50,000 bales.

Another threat to the California producer is posed by the pink bollworm which already has had its affect on the quality and yield of Arizona cotton and California cotton south of the Tehachapis.

I would like to commend the initative taken by the Western Cotton Growers Association through the support of the state assembly of California for levying upon themselves a 50 cents per bale charge to be used for pink bollworm eradication program. The state of California and the federal government will provide matching funds for this program. This is an excellent example of cooperation by private enterprise and state and federal government. In intend to work vigorously for the $1,200,000 appropriation required at the federal level for the fight against the pink bollworm infestation in this state.

Unless we want to see the textile industry continue its pattern of substituting man-made fibers for cotton, we must develop a program that enables areas which grow good staple cotton of a high quality to produce to their fullest potential. Those areas which produce cotton that ends up in government warehouses on a permanent basis should be encouraged to grow better quality cotton or switch to another type of agricultural product.

This year's loan values and grade differentials which discourage low quality cotton, should be continued. These measures indicate a realization of the fact that American agriculture has undergone a tremendous change. The small farm is being consolidated into the large farm. The margin of profit is being constantly reduced. Capital outlays for necessary farm equipment are rising. One of the purposes of the Agriculture Adjustment Act of 1965 was to reduce non-productive cotton acreage.

Today cotton is at its crossroads. Through technological advances and efficient and well-financed promotional campaign, the manufacturers of man-made fiber products are taking markets away from cotton fabric producers. The Cotton Research and Promotion Act of 1965 which your associated actively supported is a new and imaginative program which has the potential to bring about increased utilization of cotton. The active support of all agricultural organizations is needed, however, to insure the future success of this venture.

The cotton merchants and other first buyers, as I understand, have been delegated by the Cotton Board, established by this legislation, to act as the collectors of the one dollar per bale from the cotton producer. I realize that this will most likely pose an extra burden upon you as individuals, but your full support and cooperation can guarantee in the long-run the success of this program which hopefully can be measured in profits for the entire cotton community.

The cotton industry is to be complimented for meeting head on the competitive threats posed by man-made fibers. You have accepted the challenge. You are moving forward. You have realized that progress cannot be achieved without the application of scientific research and the development of new processes for the growing treatment and spinning of cotton. Continued research and active promotion of the fruits of this research can hopefully re-establish cotton as the primary fiber used by the textile industry.

An equally and sometimes seemingly insoluble problem is the establishment of price rates which will make United States cotton competitive in the world market. Many of us in congress had hoped that the Food and Agriculture Act of 1965 would provide the framework to help United States cotton re-capture its rightful place in world trade. Our great expectations are yet to be realized and hopefully United States cotton prices can be established at competitive levels.

With the passage of the agricultural act of 1965 congress gave the secretary the vehicle through which he can help to expand United States cotton and other agricultural experts if implemented properly. I believe that the secretary should abide by the intent of congress to lower cotton prices and expand exports.

The United States government is faced with many commitments throughout the world and in our eagerness to make friends among the emerging nations. Perhaps sufficient thought was not given to the fact that the United States production of cotton could be placed in jeopardy by these well-intentioned commitments.

Earlier this year, more self-help by India was urged by the congress while approving emergency food assistance. Last year I visited India and saw for myself the hunger and suffering caused by a shortage of food. The need for increased productivity of food crops in India is undeniable. The Indian government has lowered prices on food crops and has encouraged the production of non-food crops. This coupled with a population explosion and a severe drought has resulted in mass starvation.

One answer to this problem is to encourage India to produce more food on cropland now devoted to non-food crops in world surplus. India is presently growing about 20,000,000 acres of cotton or nearly double the acreage being grown in the United States. Yet, India's yield per acre is less than one-fourth of the yield in this country. However, India's wheat productivity per acre is about 45 per cent that of the United States. According to the department of agriculture: "From a physical and scientific standpoint -- virtually every acre of land now producing cotton could produce crops used for food or feed." The United States with a cotton surplus, can supply India with cotton, thus helping both nations.

The United States balance of payments has reached an intolerable level and unfortunately the importation of foreign textiles and yarns comprise the larger part of this imbalance. President Johnson is aware of this acute problem and every member of congress is hopeful that a sound and justifiable solution can be reached by our trade negotiations.

Your very attendance, your association's willingness to come forth with logical ideas to propose to the federal government on the topics which I have briefly touched on is a tribute to your energy, ingenuity and leadership in the cotton industry.

I am happy that for the most part I share your views and I will do my best to help you achieve these worthwhile objectives.

Ann Landers Visits An Evacuation Hospital

BY SAUL LOCKHART AND JOHN DONNELLY
Special to The Sun-Times

QUI NHON, Vietnam - In the emergency ward of the 85th Evacuation Hospital here, a wounded soldier of the 1st Cavalry (Air-Mobile) Division was being prepared for operation. As a medic cut away his muddy fatigues and a nurse prepared him for a transfusion, a woman, in a basic-black cocktail dress watched the soldier's face. He looked up, then stared uncomprehendingly into Ann Landers' eyes - probably certain that she was an illusion.

She really was there, though, touring the hospitals of Vietnam, talking to as many men as she could; joshing, gently chiding, laughing with the wounded of this war. She saw the walking wounded and the near dead, the silent, frequently comatose GIs in the intensive care units and the humorists in the convalescent wards.

Story Of A Headache

At the 67th Evacuation Hospital, also in Qui Nhon, she asked a soldier with a turban of white gauze wrapped around his head: "What happened to you, fella?"

"I gotta headache," replied Pfc. Francis McCloskey of Johnstown, Pa.

"How did you get a headache?.. asked Miss Landers in straightman fashion.

"When a bullet hit it," came the reply.

The columnist joined the rest of the ward in laughter.

Officially, Miss Landers was on a hand-shaking tour arranged by the USO; and she conducted herself like a trouper: Most VIP tourists in Vietnam stick to a schedule, 10 or 15 minutes to a ward, two or three hours to a battle zone. But Miss Landers visited virtually every bed in every ward, talking to each patient for as long as he cared or had the strength to.

She Meets A Surgeon

In the back of Ward 5 of the 85th Evacuation Hospital, is a small area where on duty medical personnel gather to talk and unwind. Against a wall, a surgeon, his eyes tired and harried under the green operating cap, leaned drinking black coffee and smoking a cigaret.

An officer accompanying Miss Landers volunteered the information that "he hasn't had his boots off in 48 hours," and still had to operate on the newly arrived patients. She asked the doctor about it.

"We're getting the overflow from the Eye Corps," he replied laconally, Eye Corps is what people in Vietnam call the 1st Corps Area, the northernmost military sector, where GI's have been fighting some of the war's most bitter and costly battles in and around the demilitarized zone.

'Seen Enough Bodies'

"You're doing a magnificient job, doctor," said Miss Landers.

"I've seen enough bodies," the surgeon replied.

"How long have you got left?" she asked.

"Twenty three days and a wake-up." In Vietnam, privates are not the only ones who keep track of their last days, and even surgeons refuse to count their last morning as a full day.

"When you get back to the States and think back on this, you'll realize what a wonderful job you've all been doing," Miss Landers said.

"When I get back to the States," said the doctor, "I'll try to forget everything that has happened."

In Vietnam, some people no longer can be impressed, either by celebrities or by themselves. Outside the ward, Miss Landers turned to the hospital's executive officer and said simply: "What can you say to men like that? They're simply magnificent."

The Prison Ward

Another ward was surrounded with barbed wire and guarded by MP's. "What is that?" she asked.

The prisoner ward, she was told. Walking through the ward, she smiled compassionately at the wounded. Some stared sullenly back, but others smiled in reply. It is doubtful that many of the VC knew of Ann Landers, but a smile has been known to work wonders.

Swathed from head to toe in bandages, with one leg in traction, S-Sgt. Antonio Milstead of Harlingen, Tex., grinned up at Miss Landers.

"The worst is over," Milstead said, "besides, I'm one of the lucky ones."

Miss Landers, eyeing the sizable percentage of his body that was bandaged, asked incredulously: "How's that?"

"Well," said Milstead, "I only got four months 'til I get out of the Army. The way I'm wounded, it'll take me that long to recover. Now that poor guy over there," he nodded toward a sleeping figure three beds away, "he's only got two weeks to go. He'll be healing on his own time."

"What fantastic spirit," Miss Landers mused later, "a guy walking around with a bullet hole in his head, and he's got a 'headache.' And Milstead is concerned only that he convalesce on Uncle Sam's time and not on his own."

Under Close Guard

Leaving a ward, Miss Landers noticed for the first time the MPs who had shadowed her everytime she had been outside all day.

"Who," she asked, "are they?"

"That's your security, Ma'am," replied an officer. "Today is Ho Chi Minh's birthday."

That night, Miss Landers stayed at the house of the commanding general of the Qui Nhon support command. An MP was stationed on the balcony outside her window. The next morning, flying to visit another hospital at Cam Ranh Bay, armed helicopters flew escort. It is all part of being a celebrity in Vietnam, and must be borne.

Miss Landers undoubtedly has gained more than just an appreciation of GI humor, or a knowledge of what war can do to men. In the space of 12 hours, she visited more than 500 men in two hospitals, and they left their mark. Earlier, as she had watched wounded men being wheeled to the operating tables, she had mused, almost to herself: "There must be a better way. There must be a better way."

It was something she said to herself again and again during her stay in this war-torn land.

Flagpole Tragedy Likened to Famed Iwo Jima Scene

SPRINGFIELD, Va. (AP) — A witness said it was like the famous Marine flag-raising at Iwo Jima.

Except this time it was six Army enlisted men raising the flag pole. And instead of a battle-pocked hill on a distant island, the scene was a Little League baseball field in a Washington suburb.

Then the 40-foot metal pole swayed. The six soldiers strained, trying to hold it in place.

But the pole toppled, hitting a 7,200-volt power line. Electricity crackled down the pole, spitting and hissing in blue and white flashes.

The six soldiers fell dead in the mud, their clothes smoking, some of them burned almost beyond recognition.

The Army identified the six soldiers, all assigned to the community assistance project from Ft. Belvoir, Va., as: Pvt. Charles P. Oliver, Vermilion, Ohio; Spec. 4 Kenneth G. Steiner, St. Ann, Mo.; Pvt. Marvin D. Harrison, Jacksonville, Fla.; Pvt. Paul D. Briggs, Waco, Tex.; Pvt. Anthony B. Evans, Uniontown, Pa.; Pvt. Charles M. Whaleyn, Aberdeen, Ohio.

"It looked like that group in the Iwo Jima statue," said 16-year-old Bob Ramey, who witnessed the midafternoon tragedy.

Because the ground was wet, would-be rescuers, including four other Ft. Belvoir soldiers in the 10-man work party, were warned away from the accident scene until the power could be cut off.

Dr. William Enos, a Virginia medical examiner, said the men all died virtually instantly.

The victims had been part of a detail working all week to ready the Little League field near the Army base. It was for use by teams of youngsters from Ft. Belvoir and surrounding suburban areas.

Yet he was a regular customer — seat A15 — for 15 years at the Folies Bergere. Each night he sent chocolates, flowers and cigarettes backstage to Micheline Roine and Nicole Delattre.

When the shy old man plucked up courage to meet them he and the girls became close friends.

His closest friends were in the Salvation Army. He stayed at its hostels and attended its services every Sunday.

He left the biggest part of his money, $98,000, to Annie Graves, a 36-year-old Salvation Army worker.

"I am surprised as anyone," said Miss Graves. "I only used to talk to him and ask him how he was."

U THANT'S BIAS

In tracing the roots of the Middle East crisis, informed citizens can hardly fail to observe that U Thant, Secretary General of the United Nations, precipitated one of the worst developments in the situation.

This was Mr. U Thant's immediate, affirmative response to Egypt's demand for withdrawal of the U. N. peace-keeping force from positions along the Israeli border. It was not necessary for U Thant to take this action, for the peace-keeping force had been created by the U. N. General Assembly and not by the Secretary General himself. With this sudden, irresponsible action, U Thant opened the door to direct action to Col. Nasser of Egypt.

For example, with the almost overnight withdrawal of the U.N. troops, Nasser was able to send troops to blockade the narrow straits which control Israel's access to the Red Sea and its markets in Africa and Asia. Automatically, war tension was increased.

Western peoples should not overlook U Thant's strange behavior. In the past the Burmese neutralist who heads the bureaucratic machinery of the U. N. has gone all out to assert the U.N.'s authority in international disputes. But he made no such assertion of authority against the Egyptians, who are sponsored by the Soviet Union. He didn't even attempt to delay an action that was bound to promote the communist goal of stirring trouble in the oil-rich Middle East.

U Thant's action in the Israeli-Egyptian crisis is in striking contrast to his actions and statements with regard to the war in Vietnam. The U. N. Secretary General has used his office to try to bend the United States to his will, virtually adopting Hanoi's position on the aerial bombing and suggesting that the U. S., by its air raids against the Red regime, was on the verge of starting World War III.

U Thant's behavior, in this and other situations, gives abundant evidence of where his sympathies lie. Nasser's Egypt, of course, is one of the revolutionary states of the world. It is very close to the communist bloc countries. Nasser desires to oust the Western countries from their oil concessions in the Middle East, a goal which U Thant undoubtedly shares.

The bias U Thant has shown toward the Egyptians is all the more graphically illustrated by the failure of his office -- and of the Afro-Asian bloc in the U.N. --to pay any attention to other threats to the peace in the Middle East. Since the early 1960s, Egypt has had 50,000 soldiers occupying the little Red Sea country of Yemen, but U Thant and the U. N. have not condemned Egypt's aggression there.

For many months, Egyptian agents, infiltrators and saboteurs have been conducting a terrorist war against the vital British naval-air base of Aden at the southern end of the Red Sea and against the South Arabian Federation. But the U. N. persists in seeing no evil.

A three-man U. N. team visited Adan this spring, but refused to even consult with South Arabian Federation officials -- the lawful authorities in the area. U Thant had no word of reproach for the U. N.'s emissaries. He was too busy trying to pressure the United States into backing down before the forces of aggression in Southeast Asia. In another situation, involving Syrian sabotage raids, the U. N Secretary General was equally blind to aggression by a pro-communist country.

U Thant's position is understandable, in one sense. No doubt his sympathies are in line with the policies of the majority of countries in the United Nations organization. The more than 100 countries in the U.N., after all are largely nations from the communist world or the so-called Third World of backward, neutralist nations. Thus the majority of states in the U. N. fall into one of two classes: (1) communist or openly pro-communist nations, or (2) nations which envy America and want to penalize the U. S. for its affluence. Many of the new nations of Africa, which are so numerous in the U. N., belong to the second group.

The United Nations talks peace, but the U.N.'s definition of peace invariably is one which benefits the enemies of freedom. "Peace" for U Thant means Western withdrawal at every point and accommodation to the demands of the revolutionary states and movements. In short, U Thant's career as Secretary General clearly illustrates his anti-Western outlook -- an outlook which he clearly shares with the majority of states in the U.N. organization.

Lake Yields Angler's Wallet 5 Years Later

WEST PLAINS, Mo. (AP) — Five years ago Earl Hall, West Plains auctioneer, was fishing on a farm lake north of here.

He hooked a bass and turned over his canoe while trying to land his catch. The bass got away. Hall nearly drowned, and he lost his billfold which contained $500 in cash and several hundred dollars in checks.

For several days he and others dragged the lake. Divers spent hours on the bottom of the lake. They had no luck. Neither did people who came to the lake to fish for the cash rather than the bass.

Among those who did not forget the event of five years ago was Elmer Killion, West Plains. While fishing there this week he spotted a large leather billfold floating near some weeds. He retrieved it and discovered it was the one lost by Hall.

The chain had rusted off, but the money was intact, although a little darker green. Also intact were the uncashed checks.

Hall was advised by his banker to send the bills to the Federal reserve bank in St. Louis to be replaced.

Federal Debt Reduced by $197 Gift

WASHINGTON (AP) — The federal debt is $1.97 lower thanks to a high school government class.

Class members took up a collection and sent their check to the Treasury Department to help retire the debt which by comparison to their contribution is staggering— about $328 billion.

The class donation went into a special fund for debt retirement which will celebrate its sixth anniversary this month and probably will reach its first million dollars within the next year.

The fund isn't designed to wipe out the entire debt. It's simply a handy place for debt-retiring gifts.

Through April 30, the special fund had collected $909,066.82, most of it from the will of the late Susan Vaughan Clayton of Houston, Tex. She willed half the income from a trust fund to the federal government to help retire the debt.

She and Rep. Charles Bennett, D-Fla., sponsor of the legislation which created the special fund, are the only donors of record. Bennett contributed the first $1,000. The Treasury Department declined to identify other donors— including the government class.

Donations since last July 1 totaled $93,173.84 and ran from one shilling— 14 cents— to $90,618.33 from the Clayton trust fund.

Before the special fund was created, the Treasury tossed any debt contributions into its general fund.

The $1.97 donation was accompanied by a brief note which merely said the money was to be used to reduce the debt.

Another young contributor apparently was alarmed by the size of the debt.

"I thought the least I could do (because I am too young to pay taxes) would be to save a little for our Treasury Department," he wrote. "So here is my contribution. I know it isn't much but if everyone pays a little we just might get out of our debts."

Phone Tip Leads to Missing Woman's Boby

BELLEVILLE, Ill. (AP)— The body of Mrs. Peggy Vogt, 17, of East St. Louis, Ill., was found by sheriff's deputies in St. Clair County Friday after they received a call from a lawyer who said his client knew where the body of a missing woman would be found.

The lawyer told authorities his client said he "held his hand over her mouth too long."

The body was found in a wooded area near a road junction at Cahokia, Ill. It was badly decomposed. Identification was made through the contents of a purse found nearby.

Mrs. Vogt's husband, Robert, is serving in Germany with the U.S. Army. She lived with her parents who reported her missing May 22 after she didn't return home after going out for a hamburger with a young man.

Investigators have located the lawyer but have not said if they have located the client.

Anti-Outsider Group Plays up Rain Image

OLYMPIA, Wash. (AP) — A car dealer has organized a "We Love Rain Society" aimed at keeping out-of-staters out of Washington.

The dealer, Dick Lewis, said Wednesday the idea is to cut down on the state's population growth by pushing the image that it rains a lot in Washington.

He said society members are instructed not to mail any sunny pictures out of the state, always wear a raincoat, and hide all bathing suits, sports shirts, sunglasses and sun tan lotion.

Of Interest to Homemakers

BY
FREDERICKA PLUMMER
Extension Area Home Economist

CHARLESTON -- The June list of plentiful foods includes eggs, orange juice, potatoes, dry beans, beef, milk, and dairy products.

Want to cut your food bills -- and still provide your family with nutritious, well-balanced meals?

Your greatest money savers may be substitution of nonfat dry milk for fluid milk and the use of less costly meats. Make more use of stew beef, ground beef, salt pork, sausage, chicken, and fish.

Dry beans and peanut butter are inexpensive sources or protein. Other tips: Use cooked cereals and fresh potatoes, and cut down on seasonings and soft drinks.

Right now dry beans are on the plentiful food list and prices are especially reasonable.

Army Drafts Cotton to Serve Young Americans

HOUSTON, Tex. -- The tiny cotton boll, which makes such an important contribution to the agricultural economy of the El Paso, Texas, area also serves thousands of young Americans in the United States Army.

From the cotton swab to the canteen cover to the hospital tent, the U.S. Army Air Defense Center at Fort Bliss enlists the cotton boll and millions of his cousins for a local consumption rate that provides more than $1,000,000 a year for the cotton industry.

The cotton boll dons the Army olive green color at about the same time that the new recruit begins his tour of active duty. In his first week in the army, each new recruit receives 32 pounds of cotton in his clothing issue and another 22 pounds in the organizational equipment he is issued, such as duffel bags and pup tents.

While Fort Bliss receives nearly 1,000 new recruits each week of the year, the army must "draft" many times that number of cotton bolls to make up the 54 pounds of cotton that will accompany the soldier for nearly the rest of his active military career.

It takes more than 100 bales of cotton to supply the needs of the new recruits each week, and a cotton bale weighs approximately 500 pounds. The cost averages $19,044 worth of cotton each week. Each cotton bale will supply enough fiber to outfit nine soldiers with a complete set of clothes and equipment.

In the regular army issue, cotton can be found in such obvious items as undershirts and drawers, and such obscure items as tentage and line, issued at a rate of 11,000 annually.

Some other items containing cotton in their annual issue includes socks and neckties, 356,-158; handkerchiefs, 359,055; cotton khaki trousers and shirts, 371,074; and baseball, field and service caps, 184,692. All total 5,488,063 items containing cotton are issued annually.

It is evident from these figures that not all cotton leaving the El Paso area ends up as bright colored fabrics for sport shirts or in a copy of the latest Paris gown. While military service may not be the most glamorous assignment for cotton, it is no less significant.

From the first Army uniforms to the latest in Army dress, and from the American flag to the simple arm patch worn by every soldier, the cotton boll has woven a fundamental place for itself in the United States Army. -- Information Office, U. S. Army Air Defense Center, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Low Prices to Farmers Could Elevate Food Costs

CHICAGO -- Will supply and demand force us to pay more for food?

It's almost magical the way in which supply and demand determine market prices. Nobody seems to have anything to do with it. Prices are somehow forced down when buyers want less than sellers offer.

This rather vague explanation is the way economics text books describe the interesting process so often glibly referred to as the "law of supply and demand". One economics text states the law is a "statement of tendencies toward an equilibrium position in which the amount offered for sale will just be taken off the market." The truth of this is becoming increasingly evident in the food industry.

Says C. O. Emrich, Norfolk, Neb., chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board: "Should the farm price situation fail to improve in keeping with the rest of the economy, more farmers will leave agriculture. This could cause a jump in food prices far beyond any this country has ever experienced; because, despite the efficiencies of modern agriculture, a steady exodus of farmers will eventually mean less food. And scarce items cost more money."

Prices received by farmers in 1966 were two percent below the 1947-49 average. At the same time, farm costs reached a new all-time peak of $33.2 billion. Farmers last year were still about $900 short of equality with the rest of the economy, on a par capita income basis, despite a 76 percent increase in per-acre productivity since 1920.

Current agricultural thinking indicates a trend away from government payments to farmers and recognition of the concept of farming and ranching as progressive business operations rather than a traditionalized "way of life". To stay in business farmers must have an adequate return on their investment and labor. Otherwise, they are forced to leave the farm, which many already have done.

In 1910, 35 percent of total U.S. population lived on farms. Now, less than seven percent live on farms and feed the rest of the nation as well as a good part of the world. By 1970, it is estimated that only five percent will live on farms.

Max E. Brunk, professor of marketing, Cornell University, declares that farmers are "no longer captives of an agrarian economy which offered only the opportunity of farming or starving. Farmers today have alternative employment opportunities. Either the farm will get a price that will more than cover his input costs or he will shift to other, more profitable pursuits."

Brunk adds: "In my opinion we have seen the end of long periods of depressed agricultural prices and our 'ladycotters' are going to have to face this as a reality of life."

How to Harvest All Wheat Grown

By J. W. James
Extension Agent

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Every year after wheat harvest we see the "tell tale evidence" of volunteer wheat to indicate improper operation and adjustment of the combine.

Ed J. Constein, University of Missouri agricultural engineer, indicates here some things to do to get the wheat combine into proper adjustment.

1. Proper adjustment of a combine will result in lower field losses and better quality grain. Most of our wheat, according to U.S.D.A. grades is No. 2 Soft Winter Wheat. Such wheat has a mimimum test weight of 58.0 pounds per bushel. It has a maximum of not over 2 percent heat damaged kernels, 4 percent damaged kernels; 1 percent foreign material; 5 percent shrunken and broken kernels; total defects 5 percent; and not over 5 percent of wheat of other classes.

2. Combine operating speed is a key factor in good combine performance. A combine is designed to do its best work when operating at the specific speed stated in the operator's manual. Normally the engine speed determines the speed of all parts of the combine. This speed should be correct and run at a steady rate.

3. Use the operator's manual to set the combine before going to the field, then check the grain in the bin and for field losses after making a trial run.

4. If the combine is not doing a good job of threshing increase cylinder speed or reduce concave clearance. If it is overthreshing so straw is chewed up, increase concave clearance.

5. If there are big pieces of straw of heads in the grain bin close down the lower sieve a little. If there is light chaff in the grain bin increase the wind blast.

6. If there are cracked or skinned kernels have a look at the material in the tailings auger. This should contain pieces of heads but only a little grain. Excessive recirculation damages kernels. If there is a large amount of threshed grain in the tailing auger check the wind blast --it may be too high or directed too far to the rear or the lower adjustable sieve is closed too far.

7. If grain is being carried over with the straw, overloading may be the cause. Set the cutterbar as high as possible without leaving grain and reduce forward speed.

8. Check the threshed grain and check for field losses several times a day. Field conditions often change from one part of a field to another and moisture content often changes throughout the day.

One of the telegrams sent to the bride and groom at a wedding in Edinburgh read: "Enjoy yourselves. It's later on you'll think!"

The strawberry harvest was completed this weekend. Field chopping activity has been very limited to soybeans, corn and watermelons. Soybeans planting has been going at a rapid rate. Several farmers are planting cotton for the third time. An estimate of 60% of the cotton acreage damaged by recent rains will be diverted to soybeans. Many farmers are waiting to see what the cotton already up is going to do. The labor supply is good and no cotton to chop at this time. There will be some chopping within the next two weeks. Several youths are being interviewed with no jobs to offer.

Caruthersville: 112 West Fifth Street-Telephone: Edison 3-2416

Most farmers are switching from cotton to soybeans. Some are replanting or spot planting for the third time. The weather has been nice all during the week. An estimate of up to 65 to 70 percent of the cotton land will be planted in soybeans.

Weeds Show Up in Cotton

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Some hard to kill grass and weeds are now showing up in cotton fields according to Agricultural Extension Agent W. F. James. These can be controlled by the use of a number of different post emergent treatments.

1. Herbicidal oils can be applied on cotton 2-3 inches tall- that is free from disease or mechanical injury. Four to five gallons per acre is applied on a ten inch band.

2. DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant as directed spray after cotton is three inches tall. Stop at first bloom. High temperatures needed for best results.

3. Karmex plus surfactant - after cotton is 6 inches tall - 0.3 lbs. of actual diuron per treated acre - 2 pints of surfactant in 50 gallons of spray mix.

4. Karmex plus DSMA or MSMA plus surfactant - cotton must be 6 inches tall. Stop at first bloom - 0.2 pound of actual diuron per treated acre - 3.0 lbs. DSMA or 2.0 pounds MSMA per treated acre.

5. Caparol plus surfactant plus DSMA or MSMA - on cotton 6 inches tall before grass or weeds are 2 inches tall. Use .5 or .6 lbs. of actual prometryne per treated acre plus same rates of DSMA or MSMA suggested above.

There are other chemicals or combination of chemicals which have label clearance that are not on our recommended list. These include Cotoran and Herban. Such chemicals have not been tested long enough under varying conditions by the University, so they could be placed on our recommended list.

Of Interest to Homemakers

BY
FREDERICKA PLUMMER
Extension Area Home Economist

CHARLESTON -- The June list of plentiful foods includes eggs, orange juice, potatoes, dry beans, beef, milk, and dairy products.

Want to cut your food bills -- and still provide your family with nutritious, well-balanced meals?

Your greatest money savers may be substitution of nonfat dry milk for fluid milk and the use of less costly meats. Make more use of stew beef, ground beef, salt pork, sausage, chicken, and fish.

Dry beans and peanut butter are inexpensive sources or protein. Other tips: Use cooked cereals and fresh potatoes, and cut down on seasonings and soft drinks.

Right now dry beans are on the plentiful food list and prices are especially reasonable.

Army Drafts Cotton to Serve Young Americans

HOUSTON, Tex. -- The tiny cotton boll, which makes such an important contribution to the agricultural economy of the El Paso, Texas, area also serves thousands of young Americans in the United States Army.

From the cotton swab to the canteen cover to the hospital tent, the U.S. Army Air Defense Center at Fort Bliss enlists the cotton boll and millions of his cousins for a local consumption rate that provides more than $1,000,000 a year for the cotton industry.

The cotton boll dons the Army olive green color at about the same time that the new recruit begins his tour of active duty. In his first week in the army, each new recruit receives 32 pounds of cotton in his clothing issue and another 22 pounds in the organizational equipment he is issued, such as duffel bags and pup tents.

While Fort Bliss receives nearly 1,000 new recruits each week of the year, the army must "draft" many times that number of cotton bolls to make up the 54 pounds of cotton that will accompany the soldier for nearly the rest of his active military career.

It takes more than 100 bales of cotton to supply the needs of the new recruits each week, and a cotton bale weighs approximately 500 pounds. The cost averages $19,044 worth of cotton each week. Each cotton bale will supply enough fiber to outfit nine soldiers with a complete set of clothes and equipment.

In the regular army issue, cotton can be found in such obvious items as undershirts and drawers, and such obscure items as tentage and line, issued at a rate of 11,000 annually.

Some other items containing cotton in their annual issue includes socks and neckties, 356,158; handkerchiefs, 359,055; cotton khaki trousers and shirts, 371,074; and baseball, field and service caps, 184,692. All total 5,488,063 items containing cotton are issued annually.

It is evident from these figures that not all cotton leaving the El Paso area ends up as bright colored fabrics for sport shirts or in a copy of the latest Paris gown. While military service may not be the most glamorous assignment for cotton, it is no less significant.

From the first Army uniforms to the latest in Army dress, and from the American flag to the simple arm patch worn by every soldier, the cotton boll has woven a fundamental place for itself in the United States Army. -- Information Office, U. S. Army Air Defense Center, Fort Bliss, Texas.

Low Prices to Farmers Could Elevate Food Costs

CHICAGO -- Will supply and demand force us to pay more for food?

It's almost magical the way in which supply and demand determine market prices. Nobody seems to have anything to do with it. Prices are somehow forced down when buyers want less than sellers offer.

This rather vague explanation is the way economics text books describe the interesting process so often glibly referred to as the "law of supply and demand". One economics text states the law is a "statement of tendencies toward an equilibrium position in which the amount offered for sale will just be taken off the market." The truth of this is becoming increasingly evident in the food industry.

Says C. O. Emrich, Norfolk, Neb., chairman of the National Live Stock and Meat Board: "Should the farm price situation fail to improve in keeping with the rest of the economy, more farmers will leave agriculture. This could cause a jump in food prices far beyond any this country has ever experienced; because, despite the efficiencies of modern agriculture, a steady exodus of farmers will eventually mean less food. And scarce items cost more money."

Prices received by farmers in 1966 were two percent below the 1947-49 average. At the same time, farm costs reached a new all-time peak of $33.2 billion. Farmers last year were still about $900 short of equality with the rest of the economy, on a par capita income basis, despite a 76 percent increase in per-acre productivity since 1920.

Current agricultural thinking indicates a trend away from government payments to farmers and recognition of the concept of farming and ranching as progressive business operations rather than a traditionalized "way of life". To stay in business farmers must have an adequate return on their investment and labor. Otherwise, they are forced to leave the farm, which many already have done.

In 1910, 35 percent of total U.S. population lived on farms. Now, less than seven percent live on farms and feed the rest of the nation as well as a good part of the world. By 1970, it is estimated that only five percent will live on farms.

Max E. Brunk, professor of marketing, Cornell University, declares that farmers are "no longer captives of an agrarian economy which offered only the opportunity of farming or starving. Farmers today have alternative employment opportunities. Either the farm will get a price that will more than cover his input costs or he will shift to other, more profitable pursuits."

Brunk adds: "In my opinion we have seen the end of long periods of depressed agricultural prices and our 'ladycotters' are going to have to face this as a reality of life."

How to Harvest All Wheat Grown

By J. W. James
Extension Agent

CARUTHERSVILLE -- Every year after wheat harvest we see the "tell tale evidence" of volunteer wheat to indicate improper operation and adjustment of the combine.

Ed J. Constein, University of Missouri agricultural engineer, indicates here some things to do to get the wheat combine into proper adjustment.

1. Proper adjustment of a combine will result in lower field losses and better quality grain. Most of our wheat, according to U.S.D.A. grades is No. 2 Soft Winter Wheat. Such wheat has a mimimum test weight of 58.0 pounds per bushel. It has a maximum of not over 2 percent heat damaged kernels, 4 percent damaged kernels; 1 percent foreign material; 5 percent shrunken and broken kernels; total defects 5 percent; and not over 5 percent of wheat of other classes.

2. Combine operating speed is a key factor in good combine performance. A combine is designed to do its best work when operating at the specific speed stated in the operator's manual. Normally the engine speed determines the speed of all parts of the combine. This speed should be correct and run at a steady rate.

3. Use the operator's manual to set the combine before going to the field, then check the grain in the bin and for field losses after making a trial run.

4. If the combine is not doing a good job of threshing increase cylinder speed or reduce concave clearance. If it is overthreshing so straw is chewed up, increase concave clearance.

5. If there are big pieces of straw of heads in the grain bin close down the lower sieve a little. If there is light chaff in the grain bin increase the wind blast.

6. If there are cracked or skinned kernels have a look at the material in the tailings auger. This should contain pieces of heads but only a little grain. Excessive recirculation damages kernels. If there is a large amount of threshed grain in the tailing auger check the wind blast --it may be too high or directed too far to the rear or the lower adjustable sieve is closed too far.

7. If grain is being carried over with the straw, overloading may be the cause. Set the cutterbar as high as possible without leaving grain and reduce forward speed.

8. Check the threshed grain and check for field losses several times a day. Field conditions often change from one part of a field to another and moisture content often changes throughout the day.

One of the telegrams sent to the bride and groom at a wedding in Edinburgh read: "Enjoy yourselves. It's later on you'll think!"

Cotton Crop Shortest in Years

HAYTI -- Missouri farmers and ginners feel that the Missouri cotton crop will be the shortest in years.

Estimates of the crop planted and saved vary from 30 to 50 per cent of the allotted acreage.

Many farmers have abandoned cotton and are planting their allotted acreage to soybeans.

A few farmers were still planting cotton last week.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By
Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Control of Government or Government Control

TO record the proceedings of the Senate and House of the 89th Congress required 55,326 printed pages.

Dr. Kershner

The Senate passed 1,968 measures, and the House 2,148. The total number of bills and resolutions introduced into the House and Senate during the 89th Congress reached the astronomical figure of 26,566.

No Congressman or Senator could read all of the bills introduced in any one Congress if he spent all his time at that task. Most of his time of course must be put in at committee hearings, attending sessions of the House or Senate and keeping in touch with his constituents. If you think your Senator or your Congressman does not always act intelligently, just remember that he does not have sufficient time to know even a small portion of what is going on in the House and Senate.

This underlines the fact that our government has grown so complex and so vast in its extent that men cannot comprehend it.

Free government is possible only if its functions are limited to a few essentials, such as are set forth in the Constitution of the United States — to provide for the common defense, conduct foreign relations, provide sound money including the minting of such coins as are necessary, maintaining standards for weights and measurements, preventing and punishing predation, and perhaps a minimum of public health and pure food measures, and the supervision of navigation in rivers and coastal waters.

All the rest should be left to the states or to the people as the Constitution says. In a governmen of limited scope and function, freedom is possible, for the people can understand it and control it. But when we allow it to expand to the present proportions, including the regulation of our economy, farming, banking, transportation, communication, schools, social security, and all the many activities of its citizens, it becomes so vast that the human mind cannot encompass it, and we lose control.

Lost Cropland Considered Diverted Acres

WASHINGTON -- The department of agriculture is changing its procedures so that farmers whose 1967 cotton and feed grain crops have failed may be eligible to have acres planted in these crops be considered diverted acres.

The department authorizes county committees to designate as diverted acreage land on which cotton or feed grains were planted but failed and which is classified as cotton or feed grain for purposes of price support payments.

Under the new rule the county committee would determine:

(1) That the cotton or feed grain was planted in a workmanlike manner.

(2) That the residue of a chemical used as a weed control makes it impractical to devote the land to subsequent crops for harvest in the current year.

(3) That the farm operator requests that the acreage be classified as cotton or as feed grain for purposes of price support payments and also be designated as diverted acreage.

(4) That the land designated as diverted will be treated throughout the current year in a manner acceptable for diverted acreage in the area.

Today's announcement is of special importance to Southeast Missouri cotton farmers whose crops are being ruined by heavy rains and flooding.

IT'S UP TO YOU

By
Howard E. Kershner, L.H.D.

Control of Government or Government Control

TO record the proceedings of the Senate and House of the 89th Congress required 55,326 printed pages.

Dr. Kershner

The Senate passed 1,968 measures, and the House 2,148. The total number of bills and resolutions introduced into the House and Senate during the 89th Congress reached the astronomical figure of 26,566.

No Congressman or Senator could read all of the bills introduced in any one Congress if he spent all his time at that task. Most of his time of course must be put in at committee hearings, attending sessions of the House or Senate and keeping in touch with his constituents. If you think your Senator or your Congressman does not always act intelligently, just remember that he does not have sufficient time to know even a small portion of what is going on in the House and Senate.

This underlines the fact that our government has grown so complex and so vast in its extent that men cannot comprehend it.

Free government is possible only if its functions are limited to a few essentials, such as are set forth in the Constitution of the United States — to provide for the common defense, conduct foreign relations, provide sound money including the minting of such coins as are necessary, maintaining standards for weights and measurements, preventing and punishing predation, and perhaps a minimum of public health and pure food measures, and the supervision of navigation in rivers and coastal waters.

All the rest should be left to the states or to the people as the Constitution says. In a government of limited scope and function, freedom is possible, for the people can understand it and control it. But when we allow it to expand to the present proportions, including the regulation of our economy, farming, banking, transportation, communication, schools, social security, and all the many activities of its citizens, it becomes so vast that the human mind cannot encompass it, and we lose control.

Farmer Tucker had complained that he couldn't seem to get anything on his radio but political speeches, so the radio service man had to come out to the farm to investigate.

"What else could you expect," the expert finally demanded after exhaustive testing, "with your aerial strung between the windmill and the bull pen?"

Lost Cropland Considered Diverted Acres

WASHINGTON -- The department of agriculture is changing its procedures so that farmers whose 1967 cotton and feed grain crops have failed may be eligible to have acres planted in these crops be considered diverted acres.

The department authorizes county committees to designate as diverted acreage land on which cotton or feed grains were planted but failed and which is classified as cotton or feed grain for purposes of price support payments.

Under the new rule the county committee would determine:

(1) That the cotton or feed grain was planted in a workmanlike manner.

(2) That the residue of a chemical used as a weed control makes it impractical to devote the land to subsequent crops for harvest in the current year.

(3) That the farm operator requests that the acreage be classified as cotton or as feed grain for purposes of price support payments and also be designated as diverted acreage.

(4) That the land designated as diverted will be treated throughout the current year in a manner acceptable for diverted acreage in the area.

Today's announcement is of special importance to Southeast Missouri cotton farmers whose crops are being ruined by heavy rains and flooding.

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: As I sit here waiting for my adulterous husband to come home (usually between 3:00 AM and 6:00 AM) I feel compelled to write an answer to the Bronxville tramp who is mad because people don't look more kindly on "the other woman."

The Bronxville tramp said every married man who winds up in the arms of another woman is there because the other woman can give him something his wife cannot give him -- namely a keen appreciation for life and the good things it has to offer. The dumbbell doesn't realize her chief attraction is sex, with no responsibilities. You can be sure if she makes any demands on that married man he'll drop her like a hot potato.

I am sick of asking myself, "Where did I fail?" I can truthfully say I did my damnedest, but no woman can make a marriage work by herself. It was my husband who failed. And he failed because he was too immature and too weak to accept the responsibilities of a husband and father.

I know you will not print my letter because you are pro-male, and furthermore it has a cuss word in it, so that can be your excuse. -- GETTING LATE IN DALLAS

Dear Dallas: Here's your letter and a good one it is -- cuss word and all. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: The biggest mistake of my life was agreeing to go steady with Jake. Now I am fed up with him and his possessive ways but I just can't get him to leave me alone.

I told Jake two weeks ago that I wanted to call it quits. He bawled his head off and I didn't have the heart to go through with it. Saturday I told him again that I just had to be free to date others and that he should stop calling me. He said if I quit going with him he would become mentally disturbed and flunk out of school and become a bum.

I don't want to be responsible for the ruination of a person's life but I really am bugged by this guy's pestiness and I need to know what to do - TOO LOVABLE

Dear Love: Bid him farewell and make it a positive statement -- not the first sentence of a debate. Too many girls are flattered by a boy's persistence, so they encourage him to keep hanging around by being less than emphatic. Could you be one of those?

Dear Ann Landers: My parents are driving me crazy. I am not a teen-ager, I'm a married woman with kids of my own.

Dad has been seeing some gold-digger for five years. Every day Mother screams at him about cancelled checks made out to cash. She accuses him of spending the money on a floozy and he denies it. (I am sure she is right.) Dad is 62 years old, in poor health and nothing to look at. The only thing he could possibly do for a woman would be to give her money.

In all fairness I must say Dad pays the bills and doesn't embarrass the family by being seen in public with anyone. He has warned Mother to stop nagging him and reading to him from the scriptures or he will leave.

I think she should accept the situation and settle for what she has. What do you say? -- FED

Dear Fed: Since neither your mother nor dad wrote to me I don't feel it is my place to say anything. Urge your mother to talk to a counselor and to take his advice.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

PRAYER: Dear God, as we look around us, we see and hear many things which tend to lead people in the direction of sinful purposes rather than to Thee. Deepen our spiritual convictions so that we can pass on to our fellow brethen the good tidings Christ brought to earth. In His name we pray. Amen.

DECLARES DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Interstate Bakeries Corporation at a meeting Wednesday (May 31, 1967) in Chicago, Illinois declared the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on common stock and $1.20 per share on preferred stock both payable June 30, 1967 to stockholders of record June 12, 1967. The board also approved a plan for issuance of 100 per cent common stock dividend.

The proposed plan will be presented to stockholders at a special meeting in Kansas City, Missouri on July 20, 1967 stated Ernest B. Hueter, president. Stockholders of record June 12, 1967 will be entitled to vote. If the present level of earnings is maintained, the board anticipates that the plan would result in an annual cash rate of 90 cents a share on common stock outstanding after 100 per cent stock dividend. Present annual rate is $1.60 a share paid 40 cents quarterly on the 1,034,081 common shares outstanding.

Stockholders will be asked to approve the issuance of 3,000,000 additional shares of common for possible use in future acquisitions, as well as accommodate the requirements for the 100 per cent dividend, bringing total authorized common to 5,000,000 shares.

Pending stockholder approval, the board intends to distribute the additional common stock certificates reflected by the 100 per cent dividend in August.

The dividend declaration follows the highest per share earnings performance in the history of the year based on present shares outstanding. For the period ended April 22, 1967, IBC reported net income of $1,019,145 or 97 cents per share, up 20 per cent from $848,316 or 81 cents, for the corresponding period in 1966. Sales in the period rose 5 per cent to a record high of $58,933,534 compared with $56,114,257 in the similar 1966 period.

For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1966, Interstate's net income totaled $4,032,192 or $3.87 per share compared with $3,890,548 or $3.51 per share for the previous year. Sales climbed from $173,222,920 in 1965 to $191,933,205 last year.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE FANCIFUL FATHER

One bright and sunny Saturday afternoon, Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith decided to engage in a little touch-tackle football game with their kids in the street. After a few minutes, the pot-bellied Mr. Jones began to fancy himself an All-American. Stepping back, he heaved a long pass to the pot-bellied Mr. Smith. Chasing it with outstretched arms as if he were singing "Mammy!", Mr. Smith inadvertently crashed into comely Connie as she was crossing the street.

Tossed for a substantial loss, Connie sued pass-thrower Mr. Jones for her injuries.

"What's she suing me for?" Mr. Jones questioned in court. "Smitty ran into her, not me."

"I'm suing him because he was careless in throwing the ball in my vicinity," retorted Connie. "While I may have had passes thrown in my direction before, they've never had anything to do with football."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold Old-American Mr. Jones responsible for Connie's injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that throwing a football is not, in and of itself, a negligent act. While Mr. Jones may have thrown the football in Connie's vicinity, the judge noted, he had no control over Mr. Smith and, logically, had no reason to expect him to run into and collide with her; that Mr. Smith was the master of his course and not Mr. Jones.

(Based upon a 1966 Florida Dist. Ct. of Appeals Decision.)

TODAY'S LEGAL OPINION

When making a will, don't assume somebody else will die before you do. Many estates get all fouled up because a wife is convinced that she will outlive her husband or vice versa. When such an assumption proves erroneous, the estate is sometimes required to be distributed in a fashion never contemplated by the deceased person.

(For personal guidance, see your local attorney.)

Rep Tony Heckemeyer Reports

JEFFERSON CITY -- This week a great many bills have been perfected and passed by the Missouri general assembly, but the most significant thing of interest is something which has not even happened yet but probably will burst into light next week.

The reapportionment committee has drawn our present 10th district in such a manner as to include Texas county, the home of U.S. Rep. Dick Ichord, who will almost certainly be a candidate for the congressman from the 10th district should this bill be accepted.

It is felt by many this would be a bad situation. To superimpose a congressman upon the 10th district from another district could hardly be said to give our people adequate representation, although Missouri is rather good at this sort of move. I expect the proposed reapportionment will develop into the donnybrook of the year. The battle lines are already forming and the allies will be very strange indeed. It appears for instance, that the bootheel will be aligned with certain elements of the city republican group and the Negro faction from St. Louis County and City. It should be very interesting to observe your House during this next month. I shall do my best to keep you posted on the happenings. I will mention a few of the many bills which were passed.

House bill 872 was passed which will allow any school board by a special levy to supply the transportation costs of students residing in the district to and from state colleges and universities which they are attending. You can see, this might, should the school board desire, provide a daily bus from Sikeston to Cape college for students who wish to avail themselves of the service. Again I say this is permissive and will happen only where the people want this service.

House bill 555 was passed which will allow the state board of education to grant a provisional teaching certificate for five academic years to a person holding a bachelors degree and three hours credit in courses relating to educational psychology and three hours or more credit in courses relating to techniques or methods of teaching and some practice teaching. This perhaps will alleviate some of the teaching pressure in our junior and senior high schools.

House bill 433 was passed which will allow any city of the state to provide a pension system for its employees.

If you have any further questions please write me.

HERE IS GOOD NEWS

St. Louis, May 31, 1967 -- The appeal of 10,000 employees of the McDonnell Douglas Corporation for a vote on the elimination of the compulsory "union shop" clause from their collective bargaining agreement was hailed here today by the president of Missourians for Right to Work.

Richard P. Borage, an official of a St. Louis manufacturing firm, said: "This striking development at the McDonnell Douglas Corporation is another manifestation of the spreading rank-and-file revolt against union complusion. It will hasten the adoption of a Missouri Right to Work Law by either legislative action or a vote of the people."

The Right to Work spokesman emphasized that the petitioning employees "are now compelled, as a condition of continued employment, to pay dues, fees and assessments to Local 837 of the International Association of Machinists.

"If a majority of the corporation's workers vote to eliminate the 'union shop' provision," he continued, "the payment of tribute to the union will no longer be a mandatory condition of employment.

"These employees would not be obliged to seek an election on this fundamental question if they enjoyed the protection of a state Right to Work Law. Each worker would be empowered to withdraw his support from the union without fear of being discharged."

Mr. Borage said the petition reflects "substantial worker support for the objective of Missourians for Right to Work."

ANN LANDERS
Answers Your Questions

Dear Ann Landers: As I sit here waiting for my adulterous husband to come home (usually between 3:00 AM and 6:00 AM) I feel compelled to write an answer to the Bronxville tramp who is mad because people don't look more kindly on "the other woman."

The Bronxville tramp said every married man who winds up in the arms of another woman is there because the other woman can give him something his wife cannot give him -- namely a keen appreciation for life and the good things it has to offer. The dumbbell doesn't realize her chief attraction is sex, with no responsibilities. You can be sure if she makes any demands on that married man he'll drop her like a hot potato.

I am sick of asking myself, "Where did I fail?" I can truthfully say I did my damnedest, but no woman can make a marriage work by herself. It was my husband who failed. And he failed because he was too immature and too weak to accept the responsibilities of a husband and father.

I know you will not print my letter because you are pro-male, and furthermore it has a cuss word in it, so that can be your excuse. -- GETTING LATE IN DALLAS

Dear Dallas: Here's your letter and a good one it is -- cuss word and all. Thanks for writing.

Dear Ann Landers: The biggest mistake of my life was agreeing to go steady with Jake. Now I am fed up with him and his possessive ways but I just can't get him to leave me alone.

I told Jake two weeks ago that I wanted to call it quits. He bawled his head off and I didn't have the heart to go through with it. Saturday I told him again that I just had to be free to date others and that he should stop calling me. He said if I quit going with him he would become mentally disturbed and flunk out of school and become a bum.

I don't want to be responsible for the ruination of a person's life but I really am bugged by this guy's pestiness and I need to know what to do - TOO LOVABLE

Dear Love: Bid him farewell and make it a positive statement -- not the first sentence of a debate. Too many girls are flattered by a boy's persistence, so they encourage him to keep hanging around by being less than emphatic. Could you be one of those?

Dear Ann Landers: My parents are driving me crazy. I am not a teen-ager, I'm a married woman with kids of my own.

Dad has been seeing some golddigger for five years. Every day Mother screams at him about cancelled checks made out to cash. She accuses him of spending the money on a floozy and he denies it. (I am sure she is right.) Dad is 62 years old, in poor health and nothing to look at. The only thing he could possibly do for a woman would be to give her money.

In all fairness I must say Dad pays the bills and doesn't embarrass the family by being seen in public with anyone. He has warned Mother to stop nagging him and reading to him from the scriptures or he will leave.

I think she should accept the situation and settle for what she has. What do you say? -- FED

Dear Fed: Since neither your mother nor dad wrote to me I don't feel it is my place to say anything. Urge your mether to talk to a counselor and to take his advice.

Unsure of yourself on dates? What's right? What's wrong? Should you? Shouldn't you? Send for Ann Landers' booklet "Dating Do's and Don'ts," enclosing with your request 35 cents in coin and a long, self-addressed, stamped envelope.

Ann Landers will be glad to help you with your problems. Send them to her in care of this newspaper enclosing a self-addressed, stamped envelope.

PRAYER: Dear God, as we look around us, we see and hear many things which tend to lead people in the direction of sinful purposes rather than to Thee. Deepen our spiritual convictions so that we can pass on to our fellow brethen the good tidings Christ brought to earth. In His name we pray. Amen.

DECLARES DIVIDEND

The board of directors of Interstate Bakeries Corporation at a meeting Wednesday (May 31, 1967) in Chicago, Illinois declared the regular quarterly dividend of 40 cents per share on common stock and $1.20 per share on preferred stock both payable June 30, 1967 to stockholders of record June 12, 1967. The board also approved a plan for issuance of 100 per cent common stock dividend.

The proposed plan will be presented to stockholders at a special meeting in Kansas City, Missouri on July 20, 1967 stated Ernest B. Hueter, president. Stockholders of record June 12, 1967 will be entitled to vote. If the present level of earnings is maintained, the board anticipates that the plan would result in an annual cash rate of 90 cents a share on common stock outstanding after 100 per cent stock dividend. Present annual rate is $1.60 a share paid 40 cents quarterly on the 1,034,081 common shares outstanding.

Stockholders will be asked to approve the issuance of 3,000,000 additional shares of common for possible use in future acquisitions, as well as accommodate the requirements for the 100 per cent dividend, bringing total authorized common to 5,000,000 shares.

Pending stockholder approval, the board intends to distribute the additional common stock certificates reflected by the 100 per cent dividend in August.

The dividend declaration follows the highest per share earnings performance in the history of the year based on present shares outstanding. For the period ended April 22, 1967, IBC reported net income of $1,019,145 or 97 cents per share, up 20 per cent from $848,316 or 81 cents, for the corresponding period in 1966. Sales in the period rose 5 per cent to a record high of $58,933,534 compared with $56,114,257 in the similar 1966 period.

For the fiscal year ended December 31, 1966, Interstate's net income totaled $4,032,192 or $3.87 per share compared with $3,890,548 or $3.51 per share for the previous year. Sales climbed from $173,222,920 in 1965 to $191,933,205 last year.

Rep Tony Heckemeyer Reports

JEFFERSON CITY -- This week a great many bills have been perfected and passed by the Missouri general assembly, but the most significant thing of interest is something which has not even happened yet but probably will burst into light next week.

The reapportionment committee has drawn our present 10th district in such a manner as to include Texas county, the home of U.S. Rep. Dick Ichord, who will almost certainly be a candidate for the congressman from the 10th district should this bill be accepted.

It is felt by many this would be a bad situation. To superimpose a congressman upon the 10th district from another district could hardly be said to give our people adequate representation, although Missouri is rather good at this sort of move. I expect the proposed reapportionment will develop into the donnybrook of the year. The battle lines are already forming and the allies will be very strange indeed. It appears for instance, that the bootheel will be aligned with certain elements of the city republican group and the Negro faction from St. Louis County and City. It should be very interesting to observe your House during this next month. I shall do my best to keep you posted on the happenings. I will mention a few of the many bills which were passed.

House bill 872 was passed which will allow any school board by a special levy to supply the transportation costs of students residing in the district to and from state colleges and universities which they are attending. You can see, this might, should the school board desire, provide a daily bus from Sikeston to Cape college for students who wish to avail themselves of the service. Again I say this is permissive and will happen only where the people want this service.

House bill 555 was passed which will allow the state board of education to grant a provisional teaching certificate for five academic years to a person holding a bachelors degree and three hours credit in courses relating to educational psychology and three hours or more credit in courses relating to techniques or methods of teaching and some practice teaching. This perhaps will alleviate some of the teaching pressure in our junior and senior high schools.

House bill 433 was passed which will allow any city of the state to provide a pension system for its employees.

If you have any further questions please write me.

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE
BY Jack Strass L.L.D.

THE CASE OF THE FANCIFUL FATHER

One bright and sunny Saturday afternoon, Mr. Jones and Mr. Smith decided to engage in a little touch-tackle football game with their kids in the street. After a few minutes, the pot-bellied Mr. Jones began to fancy himself an All-American. Stepping back, he heaved a long pass to the pot-bellied Mr. Smith. Chasing it with outstretched arms as if he were singing "Mammy!", Mr. Smith inadvertently crashed into comely Connie as she was crossing the street.

Tossed for a substantial loss, Connie sued pass-thrower Mr. Jones for her injuries.

"What's she suing me for?" Mr. Jones questioned in court. "Smitty ran into her, not me."

"I'm suing him because he was careless in throwing the ball in my vicinity," retorted Connie. "While I may have had passes thrown in my direction before, they've never had anything to do with football."

IF YOU WERE THE JUDGE, would you hold Old-American Mr. Jones responsible for Connie's injuries?

This is how the judge ruled: No! The judge held that throwing a football is not, in and of itself, a negligent act. While Mr. Jones may have thrown the football in Connie's vicinity, the judge noted, he had no control over Mr. Smith and, logically, had no reason to expect him to run into and collide with her; that Mr. Smith was the master of his course and not Mr. Jones.

(Based upon a 1966 Florida Dist. Ct. of Appeals Decision.)

TODAY'S LEGAL OPINION

When making a will, don't assume somebody else will die before you do. Many estates get all fouled up because a wife is convinced that she will outlive her husband or vice versa. When such an assumption proves erroneous, the estate is sometimes required to be distributed in a fashion never contemplated by the deceased person.

Vandivort is a 1963 graduate of Central high school in Cape Girardeau. He entered the Academy in June of that year. He served as commander of the 32nd company in his first class year.

HERE IS GOOD NEWS

St. Louis, May 31, 1967 -- The appeal of 10,000 employees of the McDonnell Douglas Corporation for a vote on the elimination of the compulsory "union shop" clause from their collective bargaining agreement was hailed here today by the president of Missourians for Right to Work.

Richard P. Borage, an official of a St. Louis manufacturing firm, said: "This striking development at the McDonnell Douglas Corporation is another manifestation of the spreading rank-and-file revolt against union complusion. It will hasten the adoption of a Missouri Right to Work Law by either legislative action or a vote of the people."

The Right to Work spokesman emphasized that the petitioning employees "are now compelled, as a condition of continued employment, to pay dues, fees and assessments to Local 837 of the International Association of Machinists.

"If a majority of the corporation's workers vote to eliminate the 'union shop' provision," he continued, "the payment of tribute to the union will no longer be a mandatory condition of employment.

"These employees would not be obliged to seek an election on this fundamental question if they enjoyed the protection of a state Right to Work Law. Each worker would be empowered to withdraw his support from the union without fear of being discharged."

Mr. Borage said the petition reflects "substantial worker support for the objective of Missourians for Right to Work."

JOSEPH LEROY NEWMAN

Escapee Joins FBI List of 10

WASHINGTON - - Joseph Leroy Newman, who escaped confinement from a Federal reformatory in a spectacular mass jail break and three months later allegedly pumped four bullets into a Washington, D. C., detective attempting to arrest him, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

Newman and five fellow prisoners, all with records of violent crimes, escaped from the District of Columbia Reformatory located at Lorton, Virginia, on the afternoon of Feb. 10, in a stolen prison laundry truck driven by one of the escapees who was reportedly dressed in a guard's uniform.

FBI Agents apprehended three of the fugitives in Washington, D. C., the day following the escape but three of the men, including Newman, remain at large.

On May 13, 1967, an off-duty Washington, D.C. narcotic bureau detective, who reportedly recognized Newman as one of the badly sought jail escapees, was shot four times and critically wounded while attempting to arrest the wanted man at a Washington, D.C., apartment house. Two shots from a .38 caliber revolver hit the officer in the chest and two more penetrated his stomach, one bullet missing his heart by inches. The gunman then commandeered the car of a passing motorist at gunpoint, forced the driver to drive him several miles away, ejected the motorist and proceeded several miles more before abandoning the car.

Newman has been charged as the fast-shooting gunman and an intensive search is underway to locate him.

A federal grand jury at Richmond, Va., returned an indictment on April 5, 1967, charging Newman with escape from a Federal institution and interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle. In addition, a warrant was issued on May 15, 1967, at Washington, D.C., charging NewMan with assault with intent to kill.

Newman was first arrested in April, 1952, by the police department in Washington, D.C., on a housebreaking charge. Convicted for juvenile delinquency and store robbery, he was given a 4 1/2-year sentence and was confined until July, 1953, at the National Training School for Boys.

In March, 1954, he was jailed in Washington, D.C., on a robbery charge and upon conviction was sentenced to a term of two to six years and confined to the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Virginia. He was paroled in September, 1957, and following violation of this parole in 1958, he was recommitted to Lorton in 1959. In November, 1961, he was given a conditional release.

In May, 1962, Newman was again jailed in Washington, this time on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny and destruction of movable property. Upon conviction he was confined at the Lorton Reformatory with a one- to three-year sentence. In December, 1964, he was given a conditional release and was declared in violation of this release four months later.

In February, 1966, following conviction for housebreaking and larceny, Newman was again confined to the Lorton Reformatory with an additional two- to six-year sentence. The escape for which is currently being sought occurred on February 10, 1967.

Newman is a Negro American who was born in Washington, D. C., on November 25, 1935. He is 5' 5 1/2" tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, has a medium build, a medium complexion, black hair and brown eyes. He has pitted scars on his forehead, a scar on his left eyebrow and a pitted scar on his right eyebrow. He has worked as a shoe repairman.

This fugitive, who is charged with shooting and critically wounding a police officer while resisting arrest, should be considered armed and extremely dangerous. Anyone with information concerning Newman is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be found on the first page of local telephone directories.

His organization is dedicated to ousting the Jews from Palestine and giving the land to Arab refugees from the Israeli-Arab war of 1948.

After Shukairy's appearance, greeted by shouts of "Long live Shukairy!" and "Long live Arab unity!" King Hussein went on Amman radio.

"I have given instructions that no one should be allowed to seize the opportunity to maneuver in order to make individual political gains," Hussein said.

He did not mention any names, but apparently was referring to Shukairy, whom he had barred from Jordan until a reconciliation Tuesday at the same time Hussein signed a mutual defense pact with Nasser, a former foe. There was speculation that anti-Israel feeling among Jordanians made it politically expedient for him to line up with Nasser.

Wilson visited President Johnson Friday and agreed with him on the need for urgent peace efforts in the Middle East.

He called premature at this time newsmen's questions whether force might be used eventually to break Egypt's proclaimed blockade in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Efforts for a settlement will focus first, he said, on discussions at the United Nations and on a U.S.-British proposal for maritime nations to declare that the gulf is an open international waterway.

State Department lawyers maintain international law amply supports the position that the gulf should be open to ships of all nations.

It is international, they said, because four nations border on it -- Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Israel.

The U.N. Security Council has two resolutions before it, a U.S. proposal for a cooling-off period and a search for a solution through diplomatic means and an Egyptian measure blaming Israel for the trouble and calling for reactivation of the Egyptian-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission.

The Egyptian resolution was given no chance of approval. The belief was widespread that the Soviet Union, on behalf of the Arabs, would veto the U.S. resolution because the United States wants Egypt to hold its blockade in abeyance.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant defended Friday night his withdrawal of the U.N. Emergency Force from Egypt at Nasser's request. He said U.N. peacekeeping "relies on reason, local cooperation, skilful diplomacy, restraint and good faith. It does not, and cannot, rely on military force or threats, on power politics, or on physical or political domination."

Thant told a dinner of the U.N. Association of Canada in Montreal he realized the withdrawal caused "bitter disappointment and deep anxiety in many countries."

French President Charles de Gaulle made a personal effort Friday to cool off the Middle East situation and bring Israel and the Arabs to an international conference table.

In a statement read to newsmen after a meeting of the French Cabinet, De Gaulle warned that any nation starting armed action would have neither France's "approval nor support."

He also said France "considers that each of the states has the right to live."

riders to military money bills putting a floor of 400,000 on the number of National Guardmen and 260,000 on Army Reservists who must receive regular drill pay.

Sen. John Stennis, D-Miss., who objected strongly in advance of the move, served notice he will fight for retention of a "strong and ready" Reserve force.

President Johnson has refrained from calling up any reserves in the Vietnam conflict but some congressmen think such a move would be necessary by any sizable American military involvement in the Middle East, where Arab-Israeli tensions continue to simmer.

Stennis, who heads the Senate Preparedness subcommittee, called the United States already over-extended in military commitments. He said ready reserves "must be supported fully with equipment, facilities and personnel because they are a vital part of our war plans."

Sen. Strom Thurmond, R-S.C., a retired Army major general and a member of the Armed Services Committee, termed it "asinine to consider reducing the strength and thereby the fighting capabilities of either the Reserves or the National Guard" when new crises are arriving daily.

He called for a searching inquiry into the Pentagon plan.

Sen. Stuart Symington, D-Mo., another member of the Armed Services Committee, said he supports Stennis' position on the Reserve reorganization. Aides said Sen. John G. Tower, R-Tex., another committee member, had protested the move as similar to earlier realignments at which Congress had balked.

Aides said Sen. Robert F. Kennedy, D-N.Y., has asked the Armed Services Committee to consider carefully whether deactivation of New York's 27th Armored Divison would serve a useful purpose. He cited the claim of Brig. Gen. Collin P. Williams, its commander, that the outfit is in a high state of training and has a good record in emergencies.

Another aspect of the plan seen by some as creating friction between partisans of either the Guard or Reserve is the placing of all combat and combat-support elements -- such as infantry, armored and artillery -- under the Guard. The Reserve will contain only service-type units, such as supply, medical and engineer.

But in Indianapolis, Ind., where they were attending a conference, the top generals of the Guard and Reserve moved to put the lid on speculation about such friction.

"There's no downgrading of either one," said Maj. Gen. Winston P. Wilson, chief of the National Guard Bureau. "Support organizations are just as important as combat groups, because without support you can't use combat units."

Lt. Gen. C. W. G. Welch, chief of Army Reserves, agreed and said the reorganization will result in a proper balance. "Our problem has been that we had more combat units than we needed," he added.

The Reserve Officers Association's executive committee convened to study details of the plan before taking any formal position on it.

Each state to lose a Guard division under the Pentagon plan will retain at least one brigade at 90 per cent of full combat strength.

Divisions to be abolished are: New York, 27th Armored; California, 49th Infantry and 40th Armored; Georgia, 48th Armored; Texas, 36th Infantry and 49th Armored; Virginia-Maryland, 29th Infantry; Alabama-Mississippi, 31st Infantry; Wisconsin, 32nd Infantry; Illinois, 33rd Infantry; Ohio, 37th Infantry; Louisiana-Arkansas, 39th Infantry; Washington-Oregon, 41st Infantry; Oklahoma, 45th Infantry and Michigan, 46th Infantry.

The Reserve will lose the last of its four infantry brigades -- Pennsylvania's 157th, Massachusetts' 187th, Minnesota's 205th and Montana's 191st.

"Eyewitnesses," said Tass, "confirm that two American planes came in from two sides to bomb the Turkestan. The bombs fell 100 yards from the ship and afterwards both bombers fired explosive bullets at the ship from large caliber machine guns."

The Soviet note on the Turkestan incident was the strongest in a series of notes involving more and more serious charges of U.S. disturbances of Soviet ships in the Vietnam area.

Soviet ships, largely from Black Sea ports, often carry supplies to Communist North Vietnam.

The United States has rejected previous Soviet notes accusing U.S. warplanes of interfering with Soviet ships.

Auto Sales Rally in May

DETROIT (AP) — U.S. auto makers, after four months of sales that dismally trailed the 1966 pace, had the best sales month in May in more than a year.

Last month's sales, preliminary reports showed Friday, were a healthy eight per cent — 47,600 cars — above sales in May 1966.

The 823,797 vehicles that rolled out of dealer showrooms in May outnumbered those sold in any month back to March 1966, when customers bought 853,978.

General Motors, with all five of its divisions showing sharp upswings, led the surge with 471,530 vehicles sold, up 18 per cent— 70,041 — from May 1966.

Chrysler sales hit 121,547, up six per cent from May 1966 and American Motors had sales of 22,602, a 5.4 per cent increase.

Only Ford Motor Co., second largest of the U.S. auto builders, had sales still lagging behind last year's May rate. Ford sales of 208,117 were down 18 per cent, or 28,928 cars, compared to May 1966.

Parents Protest Grading System

BROOKFIELD, Mo. (AP) — The Brookfield school board agreed Thursday night to hold a meeting between school officials and a group of parents who are dissatisfied with the grading system.

The meeting will be Tuesday night at the Brookfield High School auditorium, the board said.

Petitions have been circulating protesting an "ungraded" system of promotion in the first three grades of elementary school. Pupils are judged on the basis of capabilities at the various levels. If the child is found lacking, his advancement is delayed a year.

Critics claim this is the same as "flunking" and that the rate is too high at Brookfield. The board said 59 children of 381 in the first three grades have been asked to take an extra year.

Communications Center Proposed

JEFFERSON CITY (AP) — State Rep. Robert E. Young, R-Carthage, said Friday he has recommended a $21,000 addition to a pending appropriations bill to finance a communications center in the state capitol.

Young, a member of the House Appropriations Committee, said the center would make possible the preparation of radio and television recordings to keep the public abreast of legislative and other governmental activities.

The staff work would be supplied by the Missouri Broadcasters' Association. Young's proposal has the support of Democratic Gov. Warren E. Hearnes, he said.

The omnibus bill, to which Young proposed the item be added, wil be considered by the House committee next Tuesday.

Ichord Spearheads M-16 Rifle Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., is leading a special subcommittee to South Vietnam to ask combat troops about the M-16 rifle.

There have been reports that the M-16 failed to work properly when used in combat.

"It is very important to emphasize," Ichord said, "There has been nothing revealed in hearings so far that would warrant the conclusion that the rifle is defective."

There has been testimony about a shortage of the rifles for training.

Other members of the subcommittee are Rep. Speedy O. Long, D-La., and Rep. William Bray, R-Ind.

A Marine lieutenant, straight from the platoon leader course at Quantico, took over a battle experienced platoon on the main line of resistance in Korea. One the first night of his command he saw that his men were beginning to dig their foxholes, and the green lieutenant asked his platoon sergeant, "Sergeant, where is my foxhole?"

Replied the sergeant, "You're standing in it, sir. You just have to move the dirt."

A boy in business for himself doesn't worry about summer jobs

Or fall jobs, or winter jobs, for that matter. Because the boy with a newspaper route—a junior independent merchant—has a year 'round income. The few hours he puts in each week not only provide monetary returns but the even more significant dividends of learning how free enterprise operates.

The business of learning the value of money, of keeping books, collecting, buying at wholesale and selling at retail is important. But not even money can buy the other skills acquired from route experience—learning to deal pleasantly with people, for instance, or the value of punctuality.

Your newspaperboy is learning all the time. His route experience helps him acquire the intangible skills so necessary for success both socially and professionally. He makes money at it, too.

Only about one boy in ten gets the opportunity to have a newspaper route. If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by newspaperboy route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

Rural Electric People Keep Their Eyes On The Future

Keeping step with progress is a habit with rural electric people.

Through the vision and persistence of rural people themselves, with the continuing help of Rural Electrification Administration loans, rural America is now 98 per cent electrified—compared with 10 per cent a few years ago.

Today, rural electrics across the land are serving remote missile bases and radar tracking stations, building atomic power generating plants, and combining their resources and needs to construct the huge fossil-fueled generating plants necessary to meet the ever-increasing demands for electric energy in their service areas.

Yes, rural electric people today have their eyes on the future. As a matter of fact, they haven't lost sight of it for the past three decades.

JOSEPH LEROY NEWMAN

Escapee Joins FBI List of 10

WASHINGTON - - Joseph Leroy Newman, who escaped confinement from a Federal reformatory in a spectacular mass jail break and three months later allegedly pumped four bullets into a Washington, D. C., detective attempting to arrest him, has been added to the FBI's list of "Ten Most Wanted Fugitives."

Newman and five fellow prisoners, all with records of violent crimes, escaped from the District of Columbia Reformatory located at Lorton, Virginia, on the afternoon of Feb. 10, in a stolen prison laundry truck driven by one of the escapees who was reportedly dressed in a guard's uniform.

FBI Agents apprehended three of the fugitives in Washington, D. C., the day following the escape but three of the men, including Newman, remain at large.

On May 13, 1967, an off-duty Washington, D.C. narcotic bureau detective, who reportedly recognized Newman as one of the badly sought jail escapees, was shot four times and critically wounded while attempting to arrest the wanted man at a Washington, D.C., apartment house. Two shots from a .38 caliber revolver hit the officer in the chest and two more penetrated his stomach, one bullet missing his heart by inches. The gunman then commandeered the car of a passing motorist at gunpoint, forced the driver to drive him several miles away, ejected the motorist and proceeded several miles more before abandoning the car.

Newman has been charged as the fast-shooting gunman and an intensive search is underway to locate him.

A federal grand jury at Richmond, Va., returned an indictment on April 5, 1967, charging Newman with escape from a Federal institution and interstate transportation of a stolen motor vehicle. In addition, a warrant was issued on May 15, 1967, at Washington, D.C., charging NewMan with assault with intent to kill.

Newman was first arrested in April, 1952, by the police department in Washington, D.C., on a housebreaking charge. Convicted for juvenile delinquency and store robbery, he was given a 4 1/2-year sentence and was confined until July, 1953, at the National Training School for Boys.

In March, 1954, he was jailed in Washington, D.C., on a robbery charge and upon conviction was sentenced to a term of two to six years and confined to the District of Columbia Reformatory at Lorton, Virginia. He was paroled in September, 1957, and following violation of this parole in 1958, he was recommitted to Lorton in 1959. In November, 1961, he was given a conditional release.

In May, 1962, Newman was again jailed in Washington, this time on charges of housebreaking and grand larceny and destruction of movable property. Upon conviction he was confined at the Lorton Reformatory with a one- to three-year sentence. In December, 1964, he was given a conditional release and was declared in violation of this release four months later.

In February, 1966, following conviction for housebreaking and larceny, Newman was again confined to the Lorton Reformatory with an additional two- to six-year sentence. The escape for which is currently being sought occurred on February 10, 1967.

Newman is a Negro American who was born in Washington, D. C., on November 25, 1935. He is 5' 5 1/2" tall, weighs 135 to 140 pounds, has a medium build, a medium complexion, black hair and brown eyes. He has pitted scars on his forehead, a scar on his left eyebrow and a pitted scar on his right eyebrow. He has worked as a shoe repairman.

This fugitive, who is charged with shooting and critically wounding a police officer while resisting arrest, should be considered armed and extremely dangerous. Anyone with information concerning Newman is requested to immediately notify the nearest office of the FBI, the telephone number of which may be found on the first page of local telephone directories.

His organization is dedicated to ousting the Jews from Palestine and giving the land to Arab refugees from the Israeli-Arab war of 1948.

After Shukairy's appearance, greeted by shouts of "Long live Shukairy!" and "Long live Arab unity!" King Hussein went on Amman radio.

"I have given instructions that no one should be allowed to seize the opportunity to maneuver in order to make individual political gains," Hussein said.

He did not mention any names, but apparently was referring to Shukairy, whom he had barred from Jordan until a reconciliation Tuesday at the same time Hussein signed a mutual defense pact with Nasser, a former foe. There was speculation that anti-Israel feeling among Jordanians made it politically expedient for him to line up with Nasser.

Wilson visited President Johnson Friday and agreed with him on the need for urgent peace efforts in the Middle East.

He called premature at this time newsmen's questions whether force might be used eventually to break Egypt's proclaimed blockade in the Gulf of Aqaba.

Efforts for a settlement will focus first, he said, on discussions at the United Nations and on a U.S.-British proposal for maritime nations to declare that the gulf is an open international waterway.

State Department lawyers maintain international law amply supports the position that the gulf should be open to ships of all nations.

It is international, they said, because four nations border on it -- Egypt, Saudi Arabia, Jordan and Israel.

The U.N. Security Council has two resolutions before it, a U.S. proposal for a cooling-off period and a search for a solution through diplomatic means and an Egyptian measure blaming Israel for the trouble and calling for reactivation of the Egyptian-Israel Mixed Armistice Commission.

The Egyptian resolution was given no chance of approval. The belief was widespread that the Soviet Union, on behalf of the Arabs, would veto the U.S. resolution because the United States wants Egypt to hold its blockade in abeyance.

U.N. Secretary-General U Thant defended Friday night his withdrawal of the U.N. Emergency Force from Egypt at Nasser's request. He said U.N. peacekeeping "relies on reason, local cooperation, skilful diplomacy, restraint and good faith. It does not, and cannot, rely on military force or threats, on power politics, or on physical or political domination."

Thant told a dinner of the U.N. Association of Canada in Montreal he realized the withdrawal caused "bitter disappointment and deep anxiety in many countries."

French President Charles de Gaulle made a personal effort Friday to cool off the Middle East situation and bring Israel and the Arabs to an international conference table.

In a statement read to newsmen after a meeting of the French Cabinet, De Gaulle warned that any nation starting armed action would have neither France's "approval nor support."

He also said France "considers that each of the states has the right to live."

Ichord Spearheads M-16 Rifle Probe

WASHINGTON (AP) — Rep. Richard Ichord, D-Mo., is leading a special subcommittee to South Vietnam to ask combat troops about the M-16 rifle.

There have been reports that the M-16 failed to work properly when used in combat.

"It is very important to emphasize," Ichord said, "There has been nothing revealed in hearings so far that would warrant the conclusion that the rifle is defective."

There has been testimony about a shortage of the rifles for training.

Other members of the subcommittee are Rep. Speedy O. Long, D-La., and Rep. William Bray, R-Ind.

A Marine lieutenant, straight from the platoon leader course at Quantico, took over a battle experienced platoon on the main line of resistance in Korea. One the first night of his command he saw that his men were beginning to dig their foxholes, and the green lieutenant asked his platoon sergeant, "Sergeant, where is my foxhole?" Replied the sergeant, "You're standing in it, sir. You just have to move the dirt."

Now! Big Company Group Insurance For Smaller Businesses

Now, businesses with less than 25 employees are eligible for a new, low-cost group health and life insurance program that offers coverage you'd expect to find only in big company group insurance plans.

It's P.E.P. (Progressive Employers Program) — from Mutual of Omaha and its life insurance affiliate, United of Omaha. P.E.P. solves the salary continuance problem for the small employer and helps reduce labor turnover by providing important financial security for the employee and his family.

If you have a small business, you owe it to yourself and your employees to investigate P.E.P. — the modern answer to the small businessman's need for a flexible, low-cost employee insurance program.

A boy in business for himself doesn't worry about summer jobs

Or fall jobs, or winter jobs, for that matter. Because the boy with a newspaper route—a junior independent merchant—has a year 'round income. The few hours he puts in each week not only provide monetary returns but the even more significant dividends of learning how free enterprise operates.

The business of learning the value of money, of keeping books, collecting, buying at wholesale and selling at retail is important. But not even money can buy the other skills acquired from route experience—learning to deal pleasantly with people, for instance, or the value of punctuality.

Your newspaperboy is learning all the time. His route experience helps him acquire the intangible skills so necessary for success both socially and professionally. He makes money at it, too.

Only about one boy in ten gets the opportunity to have a newspaper route. If you think your son or some other youngster might profit by newspaperboy route experience, why not suggest that he come in and talk to us.

Rural Electric People Keep Their Eyes On The Future

Keeping step with progress is a habit with rural electric people.

Through the vision and persistence of rural people themselves, with the continuing help of Rural Electrification Administration loans, rural America is now 98 per cent electrified—compared with 10 per cent a few years ago.

Today, rural electrics across the land are serving remote missile bases and radar tracking stations, building atomic power generating plants, and combining their resources and needs to construct the huge fossil-fueled generating plants necessary to meet the ever-increasing demands for electric energy in their service areas.

Yes, rural electric people today have their eyes on the future. As a matter of fact, they haven't lost sight of it for the past three decades.
